Livestock Producers Take Message To Harrisburg

Grange Weighs In On S.B. 1413 As Court Responds To Fulton County Case

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Four Pennsylvania livestock producers met with lawmakers and media representatives at the Capitol on Tuesday morning to talk about their operations and how local ordinances have affected them or could potentially affect them.

The informal breakfast was organized by the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, a group that has thrown its support behind Pennsylvania Senate Bill 1413. If adopted, this law could require townships to pay legal fees if certain local ordinances affecting agriculture are challenged and ruled illegal. The bill passed the Senate in April and moved to the House for consideration in May.

Craig Richard of Northumberland County raises about 12,000 hogs per year in two facilities in Locust Township, Columbia County, where a township ordinance limits livestock operations to 150 animal units — or a total of 150,000 pounds of live animal weight. The regulations specify water, setback, and acreage requirements as well, he said.

He is concerned about his son, a 20-year-old college student, seeing little future in farming because of such ordinances preventing further expansion of his livestock operations.

Richard also raises broilers in two houses and runs a beef feedlot, but claims township authorities seem most opposed to hog operations, apparently because of greater odor potential.

However, the regular checks Richard receives from the corporation with which his hogs are contracted provides him a steady income that helps keep him on the farm, he said. That allows him the opportunity to pursue other types of agriculture, including about 1,800 acres of field crops, plus sweet corn that he sells at a roadside market

With weather and prices making it tough to turn much of a profit on field corn and soybean crops, "The sweet corn has kept us afloat," Richard said.

Doug Graybill, a hog and poultry producer from Granville Township, Bradford County, represented one party that success-

Fisher, Rendell Respond To Candidate Questions

With Election A Month Away, Candidates Tackle Ag Issues

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Pennsylvania's election of a new governor could hinge on several issues in the next month, including revising what some see as an outdated and outmoded property tax, how much influence agriculture will have in zoning requests, and whether production agriculture can remain viable in the state.

Two candidates are set for a showdown a month from now, on Nov. 5, when voters will cast their decision for either Republican candidate and state Attorney General Mike Fisher or Democratic candidate and former Philadelphia Mayor Ed Rendell.

Here we present a roundtable of the issues, with questions and answers from two candidates.

First, Lancaster Farming presents Mike Fisher's answers, presented in early September this year at a Pennsylvania Agricultural Issues Dialogue at Landis Valley Museum. Then we present Ed Rendell's answers.

New Holland Feeder Pig Auction

NEW HOLLAND, PA
October 2, 2002
Report Supplied By USDA

FEEDER PIGS: WEDNESDAY 418, LAST WEEK 329, LAST YEAR 730.

Compared to last week, very few pigs went back to feed, therefore a trend was not established. Slaughter pigs weighing from 18-35 lbs sold fully steady to instances sharply higher on a fairly good run. Pigs weighing over 40 lbs sold steady, with a few trading with a weaker undertone. Bidding was sporadic, although active on the light weight pigs. The recent pseudo-rabies outbreaks in Pennsylvania are preventing pigs from being shipped out of the state; and with out of state feeders unable to procure pigs, the bulk of the supply will continue to go to slaughter. However, local feeders may soon regain some interest, with terminal and local slaughter hog prices holding firm from 30.00- 33.00. Only around 5 to 6 percent of the run returned to feed. All pigs were weighed and graded on arrival and sold by the hundred weights.

HEAD WEIGHT PRICE SLAUGHTER 10 18-21 lbs 122.00 68 22-28 lbs 50.00-70.00 70 32-35 lbs 102.00-117.00 63 42-49 lbs 47.00-60.00 75 50-59 lbs 40.00-47.00 31 63-69 lbs 30.00-32.00 50 94-99 lbs 37.00-45.00 2 120 lbs 40.00

ALL PIGS CONSIGNED TO WEDNESDAY FEEDER PIG SALE MUST ORIGINATE FROM A QUALIFIED NEGATIVE OR MONITORED HERD.

New Holland Hog Auction

NEW HOLLAND, PA
September 30, 2002
Report Supplied By Auction

HOG RECEIPTS: 442 head, last Monday 454; last year 884.

Compared to last Monday, barrows and gilts sold mostly 2.50-3.00 higher, with instances up to 4.00 higher. The higher bids could be attributed to the firmer tone of the Midwest terminal markets, with bids ranging from 28.50-31.00. With the terminal prices in mind, it seemed as if the ringman started the day with the goal of breaking the 32.00-33.00 barrier, and there was a definite buzz in the crowd when it happened. Hog futures also took a big jump Monday, closing up 112 to 200 points, which was farmer friendly; and with pork moving fairly good through the meat cases, packers did not seem to mind giving a little more to begin the week.

PERCENT LEAN WEIGHT PRICE 49-54 210-250 lbs 30.25-33.25 220-265 lbs 29.60-30.75 45-50 220-280 lbs 29.00-30.25 40-45 230-270 lbs 26.00-29.00 270-350 lbs 24.00-26.00

SOWS: Light sows sold steady to 2.00 higher, with heavier sows trading 4.00-6.00 higher in active trading. U.S. 1-3 300-450 lbs 17.00-20.00 450-500 lbs 20.00-23.00 500-650 lbs 22.00-25.00

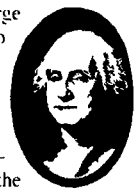
The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

OCTOBER 7–13, 2002

FIRST QUARTER MOON, OCT. 13

WHITE HOUSE DEVELOPMENT

On October 13, 1792, the cornerstone for the President's House (now called the White House) was laid. George and Martha Washington never lived at the site, because it wasn't finished until after George left office. John and Abigail Adams, who succeeded the Washingtons, moved into the official presidential mansion when it was about half done. By 1809 the mansion was commonly referred to as the White House because of its whitish limestone walls, but it wasn't until 1901 that the residence became officially known by that name.



Keep the young generations in hail, / And bequeath them no tumbled house!

–George Meredith, English novelist and poet (1828–1909)

TIP OF THE WEEK

Remember to shut off water to outdoor faucets, unless they're the no-freeze variety.

GRILLED SALMON WITH WATERCRESS-MUSTARD SAUCE

3 pounds salmon, in 1-inch-thick steaks

For watercress-mustard sauce
1/2 cup (1 stick) butter, melted
1 cup minced watercress leaves and stems
1 tablespoon Dijon-style mustard
1 tablespoon minced shallots
salt and pepper, to taste
additional watercress sprigs, for garnish

Preferably the day ahead prepare the sauce by mixing together ingredients, refrigerate to let seasonings blend. Place broiler rack on lowest setting. Season salmon steaks with salt and pepper and dot with about half the sauce. Grill for 5 minutes, turn, dot with remaining sauce and grill for 3 to 5 minutes longer until just opaque. Transfer to plates and garnish with watercress sprigs.

Makes 6 servings.

New Holland Special Feeder Cattle Sale

New Holland, Pa.
September 27, 2002
Report Supplied By USDA

SPECIAL FEEDER CATTLE AUCTION: 317 head. A full house was on hand to kick off the fall feeder cattle specials. Bidding was relatively active on all weights and classes. Conditions ranged from average to full, with mostly average to plain quality feeders on hand. However, the large crowd did witness some fancier type feeders as well, where bidding was especially active. Heavy rains fell Thursday night well into Friday, which hampered receipts somewhat; although many farmers would rather bring their feeders to town for the next sale, than miss the much needed moisture. Nearly 75 percent of the run was comprised of local stock, although the surrounding states were well represented with both cattle and buyers.

George Achille, Achille Agway, Keene NH

George and Janet Achille of New Hampshire built another new store. The new country store replaced an older store on the same site. They replaced the store but they didn't replace Telmark. For over 20 years the Achilles have used Telmark leasing programs to finance their six stores and other assets, such as, forklifts and store fixtures.

Telmark's Greg Shaw with George Achille

The Achilles needed to expand their business and also manage their tax liabilities. Telmark again provided the financial solutions they wanted through a tax-deductible lease that was guaranteed in writing.

OPINION

4-H: Life Skills, 'Hustle'

National 4-H Week is an annual observance every first full week of October. This year the week begins the first Sunday, Oct. 6, through Saturday, Oct. 12.

4-H was founded through the collective efforts of several individuals over several years, according to the Carroll County 4-H, who recently celebrated 100 years of 4-H late in July and early August at the Carroll County Agriculture Center in Westminster, Md.

In 1907-1908, O.H. Benson created the three-leaf clover representing head, heart, and hands. In 1911, Benson added a fourth clover for "hustle." The name later changed to "health."

(We like that original term: "hustle." It means an aggressive approach to health: vivacity, the joie de vivre, or "joy of life." I think 4-H teaches not only personal skills, business sense, and working in a cooperative way with others in the community, but it teaches how to appreciate those interactions. You can be healthy and simply sit at home in front of the TV, but applying that health to benefit the community — that's the essence of 4-H.)

According to Carroll County, by 1920 the system of volunteer leadership evolved. Work in junior leadership began in this decade, also. 4-H crossed the Atlantic Ocean and became established in Europe during the 1920s. In 1923, the first National 4-H Club Congress or Camp was conducted in Washington, D.C. Participants were housed in the tents on the grounds of the USDA. In 1924, the 4-H emblem was patented, and in 1927 the National 4-H Pledge and 4-H motto was adopted at National 4-H Club Camp.

The first 4-H projects consisted of canning, corn growing, and livestock projects. In 1930, the "girls'" projects expanded to include clothing, home management, and food and nutrition. "Boys'" projects added soil conservation, tractor, engineering, electricity, and agricultural production projects.

Into the 1940s, 4-H focused on projects, contests, and award programs. In 1943, 4-H boasted enrollment of 1.6 million youth. In 1945, 4-H divided 4-H clubs into three age groups. There were more than 30 projects associated with national award programs. In 1945, the Bankhead-Flanagan Act recognized 4-H as one of nine cooperative extension responsibilities. Between 1944-1953, 23 countries in Asia, Europe, and Latin America established 4-H clubs. Thirty-eight countries initiated 4-H clubs between 1953-1962.

Through the years, 4-H established various associations, including the International Farm Youth Exchange (1948), National 4-H Club Foundation (1951), the camp became the National 4-H Congress (1958), and in 1959, the National 4-H Center opened outside Washington, D.C.

Civil rights legisation enacted in 1965 required expanding audiences to include all minorities. The seventh decade, early 1970s, saw the establishment of the Food and Nutrition Education Program and the pledge added "and my world." In 1974, 4-H enrollment exceeded 7 million.

In the 1990s, 4-H was "redesigned" by the national council and extension service to give equal weight to all disciplines, not just agriculture and home economics. In January 2001, work began on the National Conversation On Youth Development in the 21st Century.

Let's celebrate this vital week and work to improve our 4-H membership throughout our communities.

Lancaster County Extension Director

To Be Aware Of New Drought Assistance

Ken Bailey, Penn State associate professor of dairy marketing and policy, reports dairy and livestock producers suffering under Pennsylvania's extended drought may be eligible for federal financial assistance through a new USDA drought relief program. The new Livestock Compensation Program provides $752 million to offset skyrocketing feed and grain prices and plummeting forage and silage production for dairy, cattle, sheep, and buffalo producers.

The program is open to producers located in counties that have received primary disaster designation because of drought in 2001 or 2002. Forty-four of Pennsylvania's 67 counties received the federal disaster designation last year, and Pennsylvania Governor Mark Schweiker has requested the designation for 54 counties this year.

The assistance is coming at a time when cash flow is very tight on many livestock farms, according to Bailey. "The drought, which also covers much of the western United States and Canadian Prairie Provinces, has reduced feed grain and forage production in Pennsylvania. It also has elevated grain and hay prices nationwide. Farm profits are being squeezed at both ends, so this program will be well received by livestock producers in Pennsylvania — particularly dairy producers — who also are facing record low milk prices."

Pennsylvania livestock producers can sign up for the new program at their local Farm Service Agency (FSA) office starting Oct. 1. "Counties that had disaster designation last year already are eligible for the program," said Richard Pallman, FSA executive director for Pennsylvania. "We'll know which additional counties will be eligible for this program in the next few weeks. It's important that producers keep checking with their local FSA offices."

Pallman notes that under the program, producers need not certify compliance with conservation programs to receive funds. Once a producer's application is approved, the checks will be issued as quickly as possible. Payments are limited to $40,000 per application, and participants must have gross revenues of $2.5 million or less for the preceding tax year to qualify for benefits.

The payment rate for producers is based on standard feed consumption data for each eligible livestock class, with dairy cows allotted $31.50 per head, beef cattle allotted $18 per head, stockers receiving $13.50 per head, buffalo and beefalo getting $18 per head, and sheep drawing $4.50 per head.

In addition to the new Livestock Compensation Program, USDA's Farm Service Agency is working to speed implementation of new grain and dairy programs under the 2002 Farm Bill, including producer enrollment, local FSA officer training, and introduction of new software.

To Plant Cover Crops

Many farmers need to empty their manure storage units during the fall season. This means these crop nutrients are applied to cropland at a time of year when they are not needed by a growing crop. Therefore, these nutrients are vulnerable to being lost to the environment because of soil erosion and leaching.

Winter cover crops are a valuable tool farmers can use to prevent this economic loss of valuable nutrients and prevent the environmental damage also caused. If you are applying manure to cropland this fall, plan on planting a small grain cover crop such as rye.

Rye has a number of benefits that make it the best choice of the small grains for this purpose. Rye can take up and hold as much as 100 pounds of nitrogen per acre. The rye will take up the available nitrogen and hold it in the plant preventing its loss to the water supply. If the rye is harvested, the nutrients will be utilized as high-quality feed. Rye can provide 3,000 to 4,000 pounds of dry matter per acre. If the rye is killed or plowed in the spring, the nutrients will become available to the following crop. The rye will also prevent nutrient loss by slowing soil erosion. Rye has an extensive root system and establishes quickly in the fall, which contributes to soil stability. Rye can be planted as late as November, but the earlier it is planted the more nutrients it will take up and the more yield it will produce in the spring.

Quote Of The Week:

"No man, for any considerable period of time, can wear one face to himself and another to the multitude without finally getting bewildered as to which may be the truth."

— Nathaniel Hawthorne

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

'COOKING THE BOOKS'

Background Scripture: Jeremiah 6.
Devotional Reading: Psalms 16:5-11.

If the ancient Hebrews were to come to our world today, I'm certain they would not be surprised to find depictions of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, Moses, Joshua, David, and Solomon in churches and cathedrals. What would probably shock and mystify them, however, would be the honor in which we today hold prophets such as Isaiah, Jeremiah, Amos, Hosea, and others.

While these men may have held the grudging respect of some of their contemporaries, the great majority held them in utter contempt and hostility. They were regarded as disturbers of the peace, subversives, and even traitors. There was a kind of rule of thumb: if a preacher was popular, he was not a prophet; if he was a prophet, he could expect to be very unpopular.

This was certainly true of Jeremiah, whose ministry spanned the last 18 or so years of the reign of King Josiah and continued another several decades after Josiah's death. As we have already noted, Josiah's reforms hardly survived his death. The slide of Judah to certain destruction continued unabated and Jeremiah observed and reported that debacle every step of the way. You can just imagine how popular he was.

Current Opinion

In a sermon at New York's Broadway Tabernacle, Charles Jefferson said, "The Tabernacle does not report current opinion; it works to create it." This, too, was the role of Jeremiah. If he had simply reported the current majority opinion in Judah, his report would have been "A-OK," because that's the way most people saw it. They pointed to their temple in Jerusalem, the daily burnt offerings, and other public rituals as evidence of their standing with the Lord.

As a matter of fact, however, Jeremiah had been appointed by God to be Judah's head auditor "I have made you an assayer and tester among my peoples, that you may know and assay their ways" — and Jeremiah concluded that these people were "cooking the books." They were claiming assets that were not assets: " 'Your burnt offerings are not acceptable, nor your sacrifices pleasing to me" (6:20b). (The assayer tested the purity of silver).

In fact, Jeremiah's report was devastating and infuriating: "Hear, O earth; behold, I am bringing evil upon this people, the fruit of their devices, because they have not given heed to my words. . . ." (6:19).

Jeremiah's report on the spiritual life of Judah reveals an abundance of greed, lies, and self-deception. ". . . everyone is greedy for unjust gain; and from prophet to priest, everyone deals falsely" (6:13). This is a people so corrupt and complacent in their self-righteousness: "Were they ashamed when they committed abomination? No, they were not all ashamed; they did not know how to blush" (6:15a).

Rebellious, Not Ignorant

Please note that these are not just people who don't know any better, but people who arrogantly reject God's will in favor of their own. God called them to walk in "the ancient paths" of Israel and they said, "We will not walk in it." God called them to "Give heed to the sound of trumpets" and they replied, "We will not give heed" (6:16,17). They are not ignorant of God's will, but "stubbornly rebellious" (6:28).

Jeremiah speaks vaguely of the disaster that is coming: "Behold, a people is coming from the north country . . . they are cruel and have no mercy" (6:22,23). This could have been one of a number of nations and peoples: the Egyptians, Chaldeans (Babylonians), Assyrians, Sythians, or even some anonymous nomadic raiders. Note that none of these people were the moral superiors or equals of the people of Judah. God's judgment would come by way of people who were not righteous in God's sight. Often, we forget that God uses whom he will in executing his judgment.

Judah has "cooked the books," and they will pay a terrible price.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
October 2, 2002
Report Supplied By USDA

Wheat and soybean bids declined with beans down for the fourth con- secutive day. Slow foreign interest weighed on wheat bids along with spillover weakness from bean pits. Weather has become a bit of a problem, as rain and cooler weather is forecast moving across the Corn Belt areas. Harvest delays have boosted corn bids and limited declines in beans.

Wheat 5 to 9 cents lower. Corn 1 to 2 cents higher. Sorghum 2 cents higher. Soybeans 3 to 5 cents lower.

CORN BELT FEEDSTUFF: Wholesale Bids. East Fluid Milk And Cream Review

Madison, Wis.
October 2, 2002
Report Supplied by USDA

Spot prices of class II cream, dollars per lb. butterfat: F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: 1.2566-1.3744. Delivered Equivalent: Atlanta: 1.2958-1.4038 mostly 1.3057-1.3744.

PRICES OF CONDENSED SKIM, dollars per lb. wet solids, F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: Class II, includes monthly formula prices: .9750-1.0300; Class III - spot prices - .8600-.9250.

SPOT SHIPMENTS OF GRADE A MILK· FLORIDA: This week - In 154, Out 0; last week - In 168, Out 0; last year - In 59, Out 0. SOUTHEAST STATES: This week - In 0, Out 0; last week - In 0, Out 0; last year - In 127, Out 0.

Milk production ranges from about steady to slightly lower in many areas of the region. New England contacts report slightly lower receipts and steady to improved Class I demand. Milk output in the Middle Atlantic area is mostly steady with bottled milk sales unchanged. In the Southeast, the milk flow is not increasing as some had expected. Florida's milk production has not rebounded and milk imports continue. Elsewhere in the Southeast, milk production is about steady. However, last week Isidore came ashore and caused quite a bit of damage. The same part of the country is bracing itself for Lili, a stronger storm that is due to make landfall late this week. Like last week, some dairy processing plants, in the projected path, are shutting down and diverting their milk to other operations.

Recent reports of higher feed costs this winter and continued low milk prices are a concern to many in the industry. Throughout most of the Northeast, good quality hay and silage are expected to be in tight supply this winter. Grain prices are increasing as this year's harvest/yields are rather dismal in parts of New York and New England. Bottled milk sales are holding at slow to fair levels. Some reported retail features are helping sales in scattered areas. Surplus milk volumes are still lighter than expected and manufacturing plants continue to operate on reduced schedules.

The condensed skim market is little changed. Sales are mostly contractual, but some additional spot loads have been noted.

The fluid cream market is mixed, but showing a little more weakness in some areas. Supplies are heavier than they have been and suppliers have extra loads, at midweek, that are still looking for a home. Multiples are steady tolower coupled with the fractional drop in the CME weekly average did cause prices to move a little lower. Ice cream production is steady to slightly lower at most locations. Cream cheese output is off slightly. Cream suppliers report that spot demand from cream cheese producers has slowed this week and a big reason for cream supplies being so long. Churning activity is about steady.

Sept. 30, 2002
CHEESE PRICES REMAIN STRONG

- Blocks averaged $1.2890/pound for the week.
- Block-barrel spread is $0.162.
- USDA announces Livestock Compensation Program.

Block cheese prices remained strong last week, averaging $1.2890 per pound. This is well above the support price of $1.1314. USDA reports that some cheese buyers are scratching their heads wondering if current supply and demand conditions warrant this price level.

That said, sales at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange were strong. On Monday, Sept. 23, 22 carloads of block cheese were sold. Twenty-three carloads of blocks were sold during the remainder of the week. Clearly, someone is buying this cheese!

Barrel cheese, while above support, is still not fairing as well as blocks. For the week of Sept. 23-27, barrel cheese averaged $1.1270 per pound. In fact, about 39,600 pounds of process cheese from the Midwest entered the dairy price support program. The block-barrel spread this week averaged $0.162 per pound, well above the normal range of $0.03-$0.05 per pound. This gap will likely narrow in the coming weeks, meaning one price will have to more higher, and the other lower.

Grade AA butter prices at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange remained fairly steady, averaging $0.9817 per pound for the week. USDA reported that surplus cream from the West continues to be a problem. Demand for this time of year remains lackluster and "food service buying patterns are steady and unaggressive." It is still early in the holiday buying season for dairy products.

USDA announced last week a Livestock Compensation Program to help drought-affected livestock producers. The new program will make $752 million available for this new initiative. Livestock producers should contact their local Farm Services Agency to see if their county is eligible for the drought assistance.

Finally, with much fanfare, USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS) released a report on the structure of the U.S. dairy herd. This report was only made available over the Internet. This marketing effort raised my expectations. Unfortunately, it didn't say much.

Basically the NASS report compared two types of milking herds: those with more than 500

Remember, these are averages, so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

Ohio Farm Wins Grand Champion Guernsey Title

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Two hundred and fifty-four Guernseys competed in the recent National Guernsey Show at the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg. The event was conducted as part of the All-American Dairy Show.

"It's been a tremendous show," said Judge Dennis Ferguson, Dryden, N.Y. "Probably as good of a Guernsey show as I've seen."

A cow raised in Texas and owned by John and Bonnie Ayars, Land of Living Farm, Mechanicsburg, Ohio, came to the top of the large show to be named grand champion. Lavon Farms Turn Point Layla is a senior 3-year-old.

The cow was an All-American 2-year-old last year and this year was grand champion at Ohio State Fair, the only place she has been show so far, according to Ayars.

The cow will not get to compete at the World Dairy Expo in Madison, Wis., however, because Ayars was planning to judge the Guernsey show at the event.

Clay Smith's homebred OCS Dairy Queenie, from OCS Dairy, Jefferson, Md., won reserve grand champion placing.

The cow, a 4-year-old, took home grand champion winnings from the Ohio Spring show and the Maryland State Fair this year. Smith also had first place in the total performance winner class.

M. Heath, J. Stephens, and N. Thomas, Westminster, Md., took home junior champion in the open show. Austin and Lucas Ayars had the reserve junior champion.

In the youth show, Erin Yost, Ferndale, Ca., had the grand champion. Reserve grand champion in the youth show was Jastes Lotto Katrina, owned by Alan Debnam, Chestertown, Md.

Judge Ferguson, Dryden, N.Y., a Semex representative, has also worked as a Guernsey herdsman.

Grand champion winner of the recent National Guernsey Show was John Ayars, Mechanicsburg, Ohio. He is joined by National Guernsey Queen Julie Sollenberger, Spring City, and reserve champion winner Clay Smith, along with Chance Smith.

About 200 Head Compete In Eastern National Brown Swiss Show

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — After a "bell lap" — a tradition at the Eastern National Brown Swiss show where several cows in the championship drive enter the ring with large bells around their neck — Jacob Hushon's Brothers Three Wisper OCS came out with the grand champion placing.

The show was conducted during the recent All-American Dairy Show, Farm Show Complex, Harrisburg.

The same homebred junior two-year-old also took first place in the Pennsylvania 2-Year-Old Futurity, along with grand champion and intermediate champion of the open and youth shows.

Judge Steve Hendress believed the animal to have "the best udder of the show." In addition her "strength up front," put "Wisper" at the top of the show.

Jami Savage-Hartman, Knoxville, Md., took home reserve grand champion and reserve intermediate champion placing with senior 3-year-old Savage-Leigh Tipster-ET.

The cow's "dairy strength, shapeliness of udder, and sound enough crease," helped put her in reserve champion placing, according to judge Hendress.

The homebred comes from a predominantly-Holstein herd.

Chip and Jami Savage-Hartman also exhibited the reserve senior champion, G S FLJ Tippy.

Senior champion winner was Far Hill Jetway Pez, owned by Dylan Fry, Chestertown, Md. Fry also garnered the youth senior and reserve intermediate champion, and reserve grand champion placings in the youth show.

K. Scott Hood, Middletown, Md., owned the junior champion, Hoodstead Prelude Nipper-Et. Hood also won reserve junior champion placing in the open show.

Judge Hendress, Wolcott, Ind., Purdue University, is an assistant manager for dairy research at the university, and in addition coaches the Purdue dairy judging team.

USDA Announces $30 Million Pork Purchase

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Secretary of Agriculture Ann M. Veneman announced recentlythat the U.S. Department of Agriculture will purchase up to $30 million of pork products for use in school feeding and nutrition programs.

"These purchases will provide a boost to pork producers who have experienced tough economic conditions this year," said Veneman.

USDA has already purchased 13.8 million pounds of pork products this school year and Monday's announcement could bring the total up to 66 million pounds of fresh and processed pork products. This is compared to 29.9 million pounds for the 2001-2002 school year and 22.8 million pounds in 2000-2001.

Building For The Future – On Schedule

Editor's note: Written by Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes Jr. exclusively for Lancaster Farming, this column provides monthly updates on the exciting new construction under way at the Pennsylvania Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg. Construction is on schedule to be completed for the 2003 Farm Show.

NEW OFFICES

Most of the attention given the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's construction and upgrade at its Farm Show Complex is usually directed toward the "big venues" such as the new livestock barn, new exposition hall, new Large Arena, the new two-tier concourse, the Small Arena upgrade, family living center upgrade, and the new 4-H and FFA dormitory.

These are the most important pieces of our construction and upgrade project. These "big venues" are where the events and activities for agriculture will actually take place.

However, another important feature of the new construction is relocation of the office area.

Management of the facility is much more than just unlocking the doors and turning the lights on. A huge amount of administrative work goes into managing the complex, and this work will increase with our huge expansion. At the present time, the office area is on the Maclay Street side of the complex. This arrangement has worked but it does not have a central location within the complex. This can be inconvenient for the Farm Show team and it can be inconvenient for the persons who use the Farm Show Complex. This present office area will be a long distance from almost everything once the project is completed. If the administrative area was to be kept at this location, it would be at the extreme end of a very, very large complex and very inconvenient. The management and administrative area should be close to the "center mass" of the complex.

The new office area will occupy space dedicated to the administrative functions necessary to manage the expanded Farm Show Complex. The new office area will be located near the center of the completed complex, making it much more convenient for the agricultural users of the facility. The new office area is part of the new construction and overlooks the large Cameron Street entrance between the newly constructed venues and the present Farm Show Complex.

A detail that will be part of the completed Farm Show Complex, which is not a feature within the current facility, is the use of escalators. We only have steps and a few small elevators at the present time. Obviously, there will always be the need for these things. However, pedestrian convenience will be enhanced through escalators that will be part of the new concourse system.

Because of new initiatives such as increased premiums, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and the All-American Dairy Show hosted the largest dairy show in America last week with more than 3,200 head of cattle entered in competition. It was a great show! It also forced the use of our new livestock barn.

This week we are hosting the Keystone International Livestock Show with more than 4,840 head of livestock being exhibited by more than 1,110 exhibitors from 28 states and four Canadian provinces. Again, we will use some of the new space.

All of this is a good opportunity for us to "test" the new and upgraded venues as we look toward our Pennsylvania Farm Show in January.

We are still on track for completion by Pennsylvania Farm Show time. We are Building for the Future.

Vaccinate At Weaning And Give Yourself A Competitive Advantage That Keeps Buyers Coming Back.

Don't let the stress of weaning weaken your calves' immune response. Let WeanVAC® give you strong protection at this critical time.

Buyers look for healthy, strong calves on sale day. But even if you didn't or couldn't vaccinate prior to weaning, you still have an opportunity to strengthen your calves' immune defenses at weaning, thanks to WeanVAC from Pfizer Animal Health.

WeanVAC is a part of SelectVAC®, The Premier Performance Program of trusted Pfizer Animal Health vaccination protocols aimed at preventing disease. It's proven. It's safe. And it's reliable. In fact, Pfizer now offers the industry's first written assurance program for animals properly treated according to Pfizer's SelectVAC protocols.†

WeanVAC includes a specific protocol designed to provide calves with greater disease resistance. The recommended protocol shown below is ideal for the conditions in West Central New York and Eastern Pennsylvania for producers who background calves for at least 45 days after weaning. As you'll notice, this protocol requires two rounds of vaccinations as indicated.

So give yourself a competitive advantage that keeps buyers coming back. Enroll in WeanVAC today.

Rupert, Brubaker Take New Holland Swine Show

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — To get to the champion drive of the New Holland Swine Show Tuesday evening, judge Jim Parlett whittled down the 31-head show to the animals that "represent what a market hog should be," showing style, muscle, and soundness, according to judge Jim Parlett.

Jonathan Rupert's 264-pound hog, stylish, with a level top and ribs that "open up really well," fit the bill for judge Parlett. "If you want your hog to be a champion, it ought to look like a champion," he said.

In only his second year exhibiting hogs, Jonathan, 14, is a freshman at Cocalico High School. He has shown dairy beef for several seasons, but the hog ring is a new arena for Jonathan, who is from a farmette. He is the son of Jim Rupert, Ephrata.

His success at the New Holland swine show is not new, however, as he also had the grand champion hog at this summer's Lancaster County 4-H Roundup. His animal comes from a hog operation a few miles from his home.

Jonathan has aspirations of becoming a future dairy farmer.

The hog show was a near miss for reserve champion winner Rachel Brubaker, Kinzers, a freshman at Pequea Valley. Rachel arrived as the show was more than halfway over from a hockey game. However she did get there in time to take her 252-pound hog to reserve champion placing.

From Jet Age Farms, a 380-head hog operation, Rachel is the daughter of Doug and Brenda Brubaker. Her older brother, Jacob, also exhibited hogs at the fair — including standing in for his sister during the first part of the New Holland swine show.

Besides county fairs, she has also exhibited hogs at the Farm Show.

Judge Parlett, Airville, York County, has 350-400 hogs on his operation, Twin Maples Farm. Besides selling club pigs and market hogs to individuals, he also sells breeding stock.

Parlett has been showing for many years, starting with his first champion animal at age nine. He has judged hogs for 10-12 years. The New Holland show was his fourth show to judge this year.

Clydesdales Usher In KILE Horse Breed Events

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Greenwood Farms, Richmond, Mich., swept the supreme champions at this year's Clydesdale Eastern Regional Show Wednesday at the Keystone International Livestock Expo (KILE) here at the Farm Show Complex.

Both champions, including the stallion, named American Best American Bred (4-year-old Solomon's Admiral), and the other, best mare (6-year-old Solomon's Asti) were part of a group of a dozen animals purchased from Brad Remus, Osborne, Kan., according to Greenwood farmhand Andy Freitag, Richmond, Mich.

Asti won the 4-year-old-and-ver yeld mare class. The mare's dam is Solomon's Paulette and the sire is West Gate Attraction, noted Freitag.

Chuck Cryderman operates Greenwood Farms.

At the halter for the stallion portion of the competition was Steve Robertson, Listowel, Ontario, Canada.

This is the first time KILE champion for Admiral, noted Robertston. The 4-year-old measures 19 hands and was purchased as a 3-year-old from Remus. Greenwood Farms brought 14 horses to the show.

As a 3-year-old, Robertson noted, Admiral had all the confirmation they required in a champion, and simply needed to "bloom," he said. Admiral is a product of good feed, training, and care, noted Robertston. They feed the stallion a blend of oats, corn, and good timothy hay.

Work began on grooming the animals as early as 4 a.m. Wednesday at the show.

As for the mare, this was the first time champion at KILE, though she placed high before, noted Freitag.

Roger Leclair, Didsbury, Alberta, Canada, a Clydesdale breeder, judged the show, which included about 100 animals.

The Clydesdale breeder association is based in Pecatonica, Ill., and has a Website, www.clydesusa.com.

According to board member Lisa Banga, Watseka, Ill., the association numbers about 1,000 nationwide with members in 16 countries.

Gov. Candidates Tackle Ag Issues

Mike Fisher

Question 1: Increasingly within our commonwealth today, local governments and municipalities are "overriding" state regulations and taxing producers, in particular livestock facilities. How do you plan to reconcile this issue and bring back order that will allow production agriculture to grow and expand to remain viable?

I will insist on the application of existing laws, the Right to Farm Act, and the Agricultural Condemnation Review Act. These acts must be properly enforced, and on a statewide basis. Pennsylvania has always been a leader in protecting the farmers' right to farm, and I have already pledged to continue to encourage this. Just last year, the Carbon County Commissioners passed an ordinance giving the country the right to make decisions on appropriate uses of pesticides. The courts rightly overturned the ordinance.

I will also carefully consider the impact of regulatory and administrative actions to minimize their impact on farmland and farming practices. I have a long record of support for state efforts to protect the right to farm, and I will work to ensure that new farm technology can be integrated into farm operations without the threat of legal action by new neighbors.

Question 2: Permitting and regulatory compliance continues to be a time-consuming and costly effort for many food chain participants. What specific ideas do you have for reducing the unnecessary "red tape" to ensure needed compliance but return the time effective and profitable operation to the hands of farmers?

I am committed to streamlining our state government's permitting and regulatory compliance efforts. I understand that farming in Pennsylvania has been hindered by excess red tape for far too long; costs of regulatory compliance and clearances of environmental permits are a major consideration for Pennsylvania's farmers. By expediting permit clearances and compliance assistance, I will remove barriers to the progress of our farming industry. In addition, I will ensure that Pennsylvania has an experienced and accessible Ombudsman to assist with permit clearances and regulatory hurdles.

Question 3: Managing nutrients is a key issue for many involved in production agriculture. If elected governor, what clear position would you take that would effect the future regulation of agricultural nutrients?

Additional red tape is not the answer to expanding agriculture in Pennsylvania. Barriers to growth and regulatory hurdles must be streamlined in order to maximize the productivity of our number one industry. The current Nutrient Management Program in Pennsylvania is an effective structure for the oversight of production agriculture. The use of factors such as density, size and nature of the operation appropriately designate the proper level of regulatory oversight. The Department of Agriculture has established a good program in concert with DEP to ensure that we meet federal requirements, without unnecessarily restricting Pennsylvania's farm community. Regulatory decisions should be made with the input of the agricultural community as a partner, and I will work with you to see that those decisions are reasonable and based on sound science.

Question 4: Finding profitable markets for Pennsylvania's agricultural products is a key to our success. You have publicly said you would champion Pennsylvania's agricultural value globally. Can you be more specific on your intentions and the potential long- and short-term benefits you expect?

I am committed to championing the value of Pennsylvania's farm and food products around the world. Agriculture expects and deserves that its governor and secretary of agriculture take leadership in growing our export markets. Secretary Hayes has provided an excellent example of what that kind of leadership can yield, and I will encourage similar activity in my administration.

In 2000, Pennsylvania food exports were estimated at $620 million, and they significantly helped boost farm prices and income, while supporting about 8,900 jobs both on the farm and off the farm in food processing, storage, and transportation. Exports make up about 15 percent of the state's farm income. I recognize that the creation of new international markets is key to the future growth of Pennsylvania agriculture. I will ensure that the Department of Agriculture is aggressive in finding niche markets for the hundreds of specialty crops grown here, and seeking new opportunities for food processing and value added products as well as the major export items today — live animals and red meats, dairy products, poultry, feed grains, and hardwoods.

The benefits of this will include:

- Recognition of Pennsylvania as the premier producer of agricultural products worldwide
- Expanded imports for agricultural products
- Increased prosperity for all of Pennsylvania's farmers.

Question 5: Pennsylvania ranks #1 in the nation for farmland preservation, with more than 234,000 acres of farmland preserved throughout the state and a waiting list of more than 1,700 farms. However, because of an ever-growing population, there is an increasing demand for residential growth and associated recreational areas ("green area access"). Farmland preservation, residential growth and the public areas needed to accommodate that growth frequently conflict with one another. Can you state more directly what role you would like for state and local governments to take to ensure that the farmland preservation successes continue and that "smart" residential growth and associated recreational areas occur without causing conflict? How would you balance the need for growth and the protection of health and safety through the condemnation of farmland by public entities (schools, highways projects, etc.) with the public investment made in protecting these farmland resources?

As governor, I will convene a bipartisan Commission on Agriculture, composed of leaders from our food and agricultural industries to hold hearings, conduct research, identify opportunities and challenges and to recommend future state policies and actions that ensure farmland preservation interests are balanced interests in residential growth. In addition, I will empower the Center for Local Government as a Deputized Office in the Department of Community and Economic Development, which will ensure that farmers are given the tools to influence policies within their communities. I will direct all state agencies to adhere to Executive Order 1997-6, which was designed to protect agricultural land and resources. Pennsylvania already has the Agricultural Lands Condemnation Approval Board that is designed to protect our valuable farmland resources from condemnation unless no other reasonable alternative exists. I will insist that all state agencies acknowledge and use that process to protect those resources.

Question 6: Many people in the food industry are concerned about the level of knowledge and insight the nonfarm public has about food origin, quality, and appropriate industry controls that exist to support food demand. While you support state funding for 4-H, FFA, and Ag in the Classroom, what ideas do you have to address the broader knowledge gap between agriculture and the public?

I will work with the state's college and universities to seek ways of providing increased funding for college and graduate level programs designed to train young Pennsylvanians in the fields that support the businesses of food and agriculture, and to keep these young professionals in the commonwealth upon completion of their education. I will work to retain Pennsylvania's young people by supporting the successful elements of the Stay Invent the Future Initiative. Support for outreach efforts by the Department of Agriculture and by the state extension service will help in that effort. We will also include agriculture in our campaigns to promote Pennsylvania as a wonderful place to visit and to work. It is important that the public understand the value of agriculture not only to our economy, but to our way of life in Pennsylvania.

Question 7: You have publicly supported a special session on property tax reform, which could have a significant impact on farm taxation and subsequent profitability. If elected governor, what ideal solution would you like to see implemented?

Farmers are still paying a disproportionate share of the cost of rural education because of the state's reliance on property taxes to fund schools. I am committed to working with the General Assembly to ensure that all the citizens of Pennsylvania are represented in the development of a new and fairer system. I will also work to see that less of our education dollars are spent on bureaucracy and so that more money is put into our classroom.

Question 8: One of the members wrote in, "I farm in Chester County and have a 500-cow dairy. What will I need to do differently in the future to comply with environmental laws and still stay in business?"

My administration, especially my Department of Environmental Protection, will work closely with our farmers and agribusiness community to see that environmental programs are reasonable, based on sound science and are developed with the input of the agricultural community. Additionally, I will ensure that Pennsylvania has an experienced and accessible Ombudsman to assist with permit clearances and regulatory hurdles. Finally, to streamline and reduce Pennsylvania's regulatory bureaucracy, my administration will provide the sunset of any new regulation no later than five years after the effective date and will conduct a review of all existing regulations for possible sunset within six years. Farmers across Pennsylvania have already demonstrated that agricultural production and economic development can go hand in hand with environmental protection, and this is a partnership I would like to continue.

Question 9: If elected governor, what three things will you make a priority during the first 90 days in office that relate to production agriculture and why?

• Priority 1: Tax reform. The time has come for real property tax relief in Pennsylvania. This is especially important because Pennsylvania's farmers continue to pay a disproportionate share of this cost, a grievous situation for the stewards of our number one industry.

• Priority 2: Security. I will continue my support of programs that ensure the safety of not only our citizens, but of our food and agricultural products. I will ensure that the state's homeland security director includes bioterrorism and the potential impact on agriculture in the commonwealth's security programs. These impacts will not be tolerated. It is necessary, in order to ensure the safety and security of Pennsylvanians, for the state to deal swiftly and decisively with those who might tamper with the food supply, either through the introduction of biological agents or through destruction of crops and food products.

• Priority 3: Planning the future of agriculture in Pennsylvania. Establishing a team within my Department of Agriculture and working with leaders of the farm community and the legislature to ensure the successful implementation of my vision for Pennsylvania's farmers and agribusiness community.

Question 10: The current drought situation in our commonwealth brings the issue of water quantity to the forefront. Water quantity is a concern for many involved in production agriculture. What is your position on townships "taking matter in their own hands" in regards to regulating water withdrawal? Secondly, what kind of assistance, if any, will be available for producers who are experiencing severe drought conditions?

I believe that any statewide water resources act must take into account the needs of Pennsylvania's farmers and agriculture industry and the critical groundwater recharge that farmland provides for all water users. State government must continue efforts to work hand in hand with our farm community to protect these most critical natural resources and protect against the risk posed by drought. In order to be successful in a business with threats such as drought, Pennsylvania farmers must take full advantage of all the business tools available to them. As part of the assistance provided to farmers following the 1999 statewide drought, the commonwealth provided funds to encourage farmers to buy crop insurance. I recognize the success of this program — the number of policies held by farmers has tripled, and the enrolled acreage has increased by nearly 250 percent, providing $160 million of coverage statewide — and will continue to support this program and other risk management tools.

"Farmers are still paying a disproportionate share of the cost of rural education because of the state's reliance on property taxes to fund schools. I am committed to working with the General Assembly to ensure that all the citizens of Pennsylvania are represented in the development of a new and fairer system."

Mike Fisher

Question 11: Agriculture has not been considered a "growth industry" in Pennsylvania, nor has it been treated by state agencies equally in the distribution of preferred business development packages. If elected governor, how will you enable your cabinet officials to establish agriculture as a viable industry?

I believe it is time to put together a long-range plan for Pennsylvania agriculture that will help it grow and prosper. As governor, I will convene a bipartisan Commission on Agriculture composed of leaders from our food and agricultural industries to hold hearings, conduct research, identify opportunities and challenges and to recommend future state policies and actions that ensure the commonwealth does all it can to help our number one industry grow and prosper in the 21st century. We will continue the private/public partnership that's been so successful for rural Pennsylvania, and will expand on the successes by elevating the Center for Local Government as a deputized office in the Department of Community and Economic Development.

Ed Rendell

Question 1: Increasingly within our commonwealth today, local governments and municipalities are "overriding" state regulations and taxing producers, in particular livestock facilities. How do you plan to reconcile this issue and bring back order that will allow production agriculture to grow and remain viable?

As governor, I will:

• Provide leadership: That represents a significant departure from how this issue has been dealt with by those in Harrisburg to date. Pennsylvania's Nutrient Management law provides for statewide preemption of local ordinances and the Right to Farm statute is supposed to protect farmers from local nuisance ordinances. But who protects farmers when those state laws are ignored? To date, very few leaders in Harrisburg have been willing to tackle this issue in a comprehensive or progressive way. That is about to change. I will direct the members of my administration to work to solve, not run from, this issue — and we will do it at the state level.

• Educate: The general public has little appreciation of the importance of agriculture to Pennsylvania's economy. Perhaps more disturbing is the lack of understanding about the complexities and challenges of farming in the modern world. I believe the governor can and should serve as an aggressive champion of today's agriculture. Being Governor of Pennsylvania is about more than riding in a carriage at the Farm Show every January.

• Protecting our environment without limiting the ability to farm: I believe that Pennsylvania can have a sound and safe environment without harming the productivity and profitability of our farms. Protect the quality and quantity of our water without regulations that restrict a farmer's ability to achieve both.

• Promote additional job development in agricultural areas: Some 70 percent of Pennsylvania's farm families derive more than 50 percent of their income from off farm employment. They are hungry for job opportunities that actually would help them remain on their farms. To this end, I support proposals to establish development zones in agricultural areas with a new bureau in the Agriculture Department to oversee such a program. It would be similar to current tax-free development zones in economically distressed areas. The moratorium on local and state taxes in agricultural areas would attract new processing and agricultural manufacturing jobs.

• Train the next generation of Pennsylvania farmers: The average Pennsylvania farmer is over 50. We must attract and invest in a new generation of farmers if we are to remain a preeminent agricultural state. And there's a world of opportunity in related agricultural fields — veterinarians, agriculture teachers, researchers, food retailers and so forth. It's a matter of encouraging young people to take advantage of these opportunities. To that end, I will:

• Expand and increase the Agriculture Loan Forgiveness Program, which helps young students offset the high costs of getting a college degree in agriculture or veterinary medicine.

• Restore funding for FFA and 4-H chapters across Pennsylvania. This program provides operating and capital improvement grants to 4-H and FFA groups to help with projects.

• Support agriculture-in-the-classroom initiatives. Perhaps more than any other industry in the state, agriculture's future depends on the appreciation and understanding of the nonfarm public. Teaching agriculture in the classroom can foster that understanding.

Question 2: Permitting and regulatory compliance continues to be a time-consuming and costly effort for many food chain participants. What specific ideas do you have for reducing the unnecessary "red tape" to ensure needed compliance but return the time effective and profitable operation to the hands of the farmers?

On a recent farm tour hosted by the Franklin County Farm Bureau, the PennAg Industries Association handed out a fact sheet that asked the question, "Who is watching over us?" The answer was 17 different federal and state agencies! Americans enjoy the safest, most wholesome food supply on earth. But it is smart to make sure that it does not come at an unnecessary cost to American producers.

I will direct the Department of Agriculture and the Department of Environmental Protection, working with the DEP Agriculture Advisory Board, to conduct a review of permitting and compliance rules and regulations that effect agriculture. Further, I support the proposed changes and improvements to the law that created the Ag Advisory Board to DEP, as outlined in House Bill 2302. Those changes will improve the appointments to the board and make sure that those departmental officials who need to hear the concerns of the agricultural community are the ones who actually attend board meetings.

Further, local conservation districts are very critical to this. We demand much more of them than ever before. I will work with the association of conservation districts, the Conservation Commission, and the agricultural community to make sure that they have the resources necessary to effectuate quick and efficient education and compliance assistance.

Question 3. Managing nutrients is a key issue for many involved in production agriculture. If elected governor, what clear position would you take that would effect the future regulation of animal nutrients?

I believe the animal nutrients can be safely applied to the soils of our

NO SOIL SHOULD BE LEFT UNCOVERED
Del Voight
Capitol Region Extension Agronomy Agent, Lebanon

Someone once told me that "no soil should be left uncovered." While we need to uncover it (in some cases) to prepare seedbeds or to eliminate some other problems, there is a reason for this doctrine.

The drought we are experiencing is similar to the dust bowl of 1932-1936, and out of the dust bowl came the soil conservation service that exists today. If the soil had been covered with vegetation, crops planted on contour or in strips, and protected as it is today, the dust bowl would not have been so widespread. It is "a feather in the cap" for modern farmers along with NRCS and extension employees whom so far avoided one of the most severe droughts since the dust bowl.

Cover crops serve to protect, improve, and also provide a harvestable crop for local producers.

Area producers commonly till the soil after harvest in the fall and begin preparing land for the spring planting season. Most of the tillage is performed to work animal manure into the soil surface and to bury crop residue to reduce disease spores and other insect pests. Some of the tillage is recreational in nature and serves no real purpose. This is especially true on fields that have soybean stubble left and no manure applied to the field.

Once the soil is prepared, many growers will use cover crops to hold the soil in place, provide an additional crop in spring, and also hold nutrients in place so that they will not leach out of the soil over the winter. So how do growers in the region use cover crops?

First is the selection of what crop to use as a cover. Any winter grain crop will serve the purpose as a cover crop. Oats provide growth in fall, but are easily winter-killed so that next year no special activities are needed to kill or harvest the crop. Although many of the small grains such as wheat and barley offer an alternative to rye, they do not measure up to the yield of cover crop rye, and the cost to plant is relatively high.

There are many different types of rye available, and growers need to know what type they are using. There are several options for cover crop rye species, and research is under way to compare subspecies of cover crop rye.

There is renewed interest in Italian rye, which is a cereal rye that will regrow after a cutting in the spring and continue to grow. The problem is that it has become a troublesome weed in fields from southern Maryland to South Carolina. In fact, weed specialists from several states had a special meeting to try to identify ways to eliminate it from winter wheat stands. Again, if a grower chooses to seed that crop, they will need to be sure it does not go to seed if other small grains will be grown in the future.

In this area, the most widely used crop is winter rye or cover crop rye. It is inexpensive (at 10 cents per pound), can be easily purchased through local dealers, and will tolerate many soil conditions and planting scenarios. One can drill it, disc, and cultipak it in the soil or even simply broadcast the seed on the soil surface. Cover crop rye will be seeded from now to freeze-out, and it will grow through the winter. In spring, the crop will need to be either harvested as ryelage or killed with glyphosate or paraquat to allow the seeding of full-season crops.

Second, manage according to the crop selected. The goal will dictate the management of the crop. For instance, if I were to plant rye to prevent weeds and offer a mulch in the spring to plant into, I would be sure it is killed before it reaches 12 inches in height in the spring. However, if I intend to harvest it for ryelage, then I will need to harvest it at the boot stage of development, usually in late April or early May.

Finally, cover crops are management intensive. They attract numerous insect pests because they are the only green plants in February and March for certain insects such as cutworm moths to lay their eggs in. Growers need to recognize this and treat accordingly.

In addition, no-tilling into rye is no easy task. Specially designed planters need to be adjusted to properly place the seed into the soil and ensure good seed-to-soil contact.

Finally, rye is notorious for going from a quality silage crop to worthless if left in the field too long before harvest. Timely harvest is critical. The use of cover crops offers many benefits, and is one more way local growers seek to preserve our natural resources.

PDMP To Present Nutrient Management Tips

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The Kulp Family Dairy, Inc. in Martinsburg, and the Professional Dairy Managers of Pennsylvania invite dairy producers and advisors to attend "Balancing Act — Reality and Responsibilities of Nutrient Management," a PDMP membership meeting at the dairy and at Morrison's Cove Memorial Park Oct. 10.

Phil Kulp, partner in the 1,300-cow dairy will talk about his component system, stewardship, and community relations.

Kulp admits the learning curve is steep. "I can't possibly know all the regulations and I don't know everything about managing the separate components."

Phil's nutrient management advisers, Bill Fink with TeamAg, Marty Campfield from Nutrient Solutions, Inc., and Steve Shaw from Cargill will be speaking about how the Kulp's are implementing regulations, collecting and utilizing data, and testing phosphorus-based feeding.

Alyssa Dodd, agricultural environmental policy expert from Penn State Cooperative Extension, will help dairy producers sort through the regulations and offer resources.

Cost for this meeting is $10 for PDMP members and $50 for nonmembers. The program runs from 8:45 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. and lunch is included. Contact PDMP or one of the sponsors for a special rate for producers that are interested in joining the organization.

Reservations are required. Please send your payment and RSVP by Oct. 1 to Tammy Perkins, 324 Henning Building, University Park, PA 16802, or call toll-free at (888) 373-7232, fax at (814) 865-4686, or e-mail at tap10@psu.edu.

Start Clean Next Spring with Fall Sprays

If weather delays next spring's burndown applications, you could wind up with some real weed-control headaches in your Roundup Ready® soybean fields That's where a well-planned, timely fall herbicide application can help

Fall applications provide early burndown of actively growing weeds, plus residual weed control to help you plant into clean fields next spring – just like spring burndowns do But with a fall application your fields will dry down faster for earlier planting, and insects may be fewer due to less weed vegetation Populations of soybean cyst nematode may also be reduced

Fall applications of Python® WDG herbicide at 0 8 to 1 0 ounce 1 pint of 2,4-D and 1 pint of Glyphomax® Plus herbicide per acre control tough weeds like purple deadnettle and henbit, plus common chickweed, marestail, shepherdspurse, butterweed, field pennycress, yellow rocket, wild mustards and early flushes of lambsquarters

Make your fall application when soil temperatures have dropped to 50 degrees F and are continuing to fall This will help Python WDG remain stable in the soil until it activates next spring

One more benefit that Python WDG provides is the flexibility to plant corn if market or weather conditions dictate a change Canopy XL herbicide restricts growers to soybeans

When next spring arrives you can use one 32-ounce post application of Glyphomax Plus to clean up any remaining weeds in your Roundup Ready soybeans Or you can tank-mix 0 3 ounces of FirstRate® herbicide with reduced rates of Glyphomax Plus if common and giant ragweed cocklebur sunflowers or velvetleaf are a common weed problem in your fields

For more information about using Python WDG and Glyphomax Plus herbicides in a fall-applied program, contact your local ag retailer

BLOOMSBURG (Columbia Co.) — As Tropical Storm Isidore rolled up the East Coast, even the Bloomsburg Fair Sale late last week was drenched with rain — yet overcome with some great bids.

During an almost constant downpour, Justin Knoebel, Elysburg, exhibited a 1,262-pound grand champion market steer, a Maine-Anjou purebred, which sold for $2.60 per pound to L & K Mills, Stillwater, represented by Rich Litwhiler.

Justin, 13, is the son of Dan and Denise Knoebel. This is his first grand champion at Bloomsburg. Justin is in the seventh grade at Southern Columbia Middle School.

Justin's brother Joel, 19, exhibited his first-ever champion, the reserve, also a purebred Maine-Anjou. The steer, weighing 1,090 pounds, sold for $1.40 a pound to Hoss's Steak and Sea House, Shamokin Dam, represented by Len Hummel.

The grand champion hog exhibited by Corey Williamson, Cogan Station, weighed 260 pounds. The hog sold for $2.35 per pound to Hoss's Steak and Sea House, represented by Len Hummel, Shamokin Dam.

Corey, 19, is the son of Russ and Cindy Williamson, Cogan Station. Corey was graduated from Jersey Shore Area High School. This was his second Bloomsburg Fair championship. He exhibited the heavyweight champion, a Yorkshire crossbred named "Dave," named in honor of Dave Smith, whom he bought it from, in Oval.

Corey has exhibited at Lycoming County Fair and plans to show at Farm Show.

Reserve champion hog, exhibited by Jeff Longenberger, Bloomsburg, weighing 253 pounds, sold for $1.10 per pound to Terry Zeisloft, Zeisloft Farm Equipment, Jersey Town.

Jeff, 14, is the son of Louise and Scott Longenberger, Bloomsburg. Jeff, in the ninth grade at Bloomsburg High School, noted this is his first champion. He purchased the Yorkshire crossbred at auction.

Grand champion lamb, exhibited by Colby Williamson, Cogan Station, weighed 129 pounds and sold for $4 per pound to John Fritz of Sunset Ice Cream, Williamsport. Reserve champion lamb, weighing 103 pounds and exhibited by Jordan Schrock, Bloomsburg, sold for $3.30 per pound, also to Fritz of Sunset Ice Cream.

Colby, 13, is the son of Russ and Cindy Williamson, Cogan Station. He's in the eighth grade at Jersey Shore Middle School and exhibited his Suffolk/Hampshire crossbred wether named "Chuck." This is his first champion at Bloomsburg and he intends to exhibit at Lycoming County Fair and Farm Show.

Jordan Schrock, Bloomsburg, exhibited the reserve. Jordan, 12, is the daughter of Janie and Roger Schrock, Bloomsburg. She's in the seventh grade at Millville Middle School. Jordan said she won champion last year. She exhibited her purebred Suffolk homebred ewe. Jordan plans to show at the Montour-DeLong Fair.

Harold Fraley, Muncy, was auctioneer. There were 11 steers, 37 hogs, and 67 lambs at the sale.

Pork Industry Fosters Positive Attitude

member from their childhood, might better be looking to the future rather than the past for a solution.

This was the lesson learned in Centre County Tuesday as representatives of California's Niman Ranch meat marketing company spoke at a workshop in Centre Hall and sponsored by the Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture (PASA), a nonprofit membership organization based in Millheim.

The festivities began with a meal that featured delicious Niman Ranch pork loins that were donated for the event. Afterward, more than 100 people, mostly farmers, were treated to an unexpected "two-fer" when the advertised speaker, Paul Willis, who is manager of the Niman Ranch Pork Company based in Thornton, Iowa, was joined by Bill Niman, founder and CEO of Niman Ranch, Inc., who happened to be on the East Coast for other business.

With one speaking from the front, and the other from the back of the room, Willis and Niman shared with PASA's guests the success story that is Niman Ranch, and reported some of the more challenging aspects of the business as well.

Founded more than a quarter century ago, Niman Ranch seeks to produce and market "the finest tasting meat in the world by adhering to a strict code of husbandry principles," as their Website (www.nimanranch.com) reports. Willis explained to the attentive group that the strict code referred to means 1) neither growth-promoting hormones nor antibiotics may be used, 2) feed must be free of meat and/or meat by-products, and 3) producers must agree to adhere to the guidelines established for raising hogs by the Animal Welfare Institute (AWI) in Washington D.C. Willis further clarified that in addition to these standards, samples of products being sold with the Niman label must be tested for quality, including especially taste.

Among the acceptable practices established by AWI, hogs must be raised on pasture or in deeply bedded pens, and use of farrowing crates is prohibited. On hand at the workshop to represent AWI and the standards they require was Diane Halverson, originally a Minnesota farmer, and now the farm animal adviser for AWI.

Apparently the idea is catching on among both farmers and consumers. The Niman Ranch Pork Company includes 210 farmers, who are part owners of the company and are spread over nine states, mostly across the Midwest. The company markets just under 2,000 hogs each week to about 900 restaurants, several high-end retail outlets (including Williams-Sonoma), and directly to individual consumers through the Website. Paul Willis, who himself produces each year about 3,000 hogs on pasture for the Niman market, is upbeat about the possibility Pennsylvania being the next state to join the team.

Niman also spoke with considerable enthusiasm about the mission of Niman Ranch. "Our principle objective," he explained, "is to ensure the financial viability of our farmers."

The program guarantees a bottom price of $40 per CWT for producers who have joined, and they are paying $65 per CWT for hogs that are certified organic. Producers can earn a bonus price when certain identified targets in terms of animal size are met as well. Niman further explained that "The Pork Company retains a penny-and-a-half per pound to build equity and support daily operations, which is matched by the Niman Ranch parent organization."

Paul Willis

Much of the discussion following the official presentation centered on the economic realities of Pennsylvania farming, including property taxes, cost of feed, and processing, etc. Asked whether Niman Ranch could adjust their pricing structure to meet such circumstances, Willis and Niman invited Pennsylvania producers to work together to find cost efficiencies, but indicated that some small degree of flexibility might be in order.

The emphasis throughout the discussion was on the future of meat marketing in this country. Niman Ranch is interested in Pennsylvania because there seems to be a large potential market in the Mid-Atlantic region for their products, and "the future is that consumers are wanting to buy from local sources and are willing to pay more for that privilege," said Niman.

Going beyond an emphasis on local sources, however, it was reported that people increasingly want to know which farmer(s) in particular produced their food. In answer to that, the Ranch has instituted a new system of labeling some of their products with numbers assigned to individual producers. With farmer identities available on the Internet for consumers who care to look, it was clear that we're not talking here about the way our grandparents raised hogs.

There are many hurdles ahead before we know if Pennsylvania will be the 10th state to produce hogs for Niman Ranch customers, but organizers of this event promised to keep in touch with all who are interested and to hold future meetings that could lead to such an outcome, if not a more locally-based initiative. While not yet a mood of unbridled optimism, there was certainly a sense that the future may be bright for smaller hog producers who are innovative and can think positively and collectively about the market opportunities that exist.

fully fought a township ordinance and won. In that case several years ago, farmers opposed a township regulation that required stricter nutrient management practices than Pennsylvania's nutrient management law (Act 6.) The court ruled that Act 6 superseded the local ordinance. In the course of the lengthy court battle, however, plaintiffs accrued legal fees of more than $80,000.

That's a cost "few individuals can afford," Graybill said. At that time, leading ag companies joined in to provide legal help and cover the fees. Under Senate Bill 1413, townships challenged in similar cases could be required to pay if the ordinance is ruled illegal.

Other livestock managers at the breakfast were Lane Sollenberger, manager of Agway TSPF Heifer Services, a Franklin County facility that raises heifers for more than 30 area farmers, and Rick Leese, hog producer from Fulton County.

Last December, Leese joined three other farmers in a lawsuit against Belfast Township, Fulton County, to overturn three ordinances that put stipulations on new water usages of more than 3,000 gallons per day and tighten the rules on corporations operating in the township. The farmers also seek reimbursement of attorneys' fees from the township and the supervisors personally.

The defendants filed preliminary objections to the complaint in March. Briefs were filed by both sides, and the court heard oral argument in June.

On Sept. 12, the court denied the defendants' preliminary objections and held that the farmers' complaint is not defective. According to the court ruling, the plaintiff farmers have standing to sue and the defendants could possibly be held liable to reimburse attorneys' fees.

The supervisors could possibly be held personally liable to pay the fees, depending on the ultimate set of facts developed in discovery. Defendants must file an answer to the complaint by about Oct. 3.

According to a statement released by PennAg Industries, "In our view, the court's decision stands for the proposition that, where a township passes an illegal ordinance for the purpose of banning modern corporate farming and the township supervisors know the ordinance is illegal but the supervisors continue to support and defend the ordinance, an affected farmer in the township need not waste time and money waiting until the ordinance is enforced against him or her before seeking to invalidate the ordinance, and the affected farmer can seek reimbursement of attorneys' fees from both the township and its supervisors personally if it can be proven that the supervisors participated in willful misconduct in passing the ordinance, and their support and defense of the ordinance is arbitrary, vexatious, or in bad faith."

The Pennsylvania State Grange has joined with other ag organizations in urging legislation to protect farmers from illegal ordinances.

"It is time we see action on Senate Bill 1413," said Grange leader William Steel. "It is getting down to the wire, and we need to see Pennsylvania back the farmers who have supported Pennsylvania's number one industry for so long."

According to Brenda Shambaugh, Pennsylvania Grange legislative director, the Grange has represented many farmers whose experiences have reinforced the importance of S.B. 1413.

"All over the state we continue to see unfair treatment to our farmers and producers," she said.

Gov. Candidates Tackle Ag Issues

state. Pennsylvania's Nutrient Management Law, Act 6, was landmark legislation in 1993. Farmers, environmentalists, and local government leaders came together to create a law that remains one of the better laws of it's kind in the country. I support the continuation of Act 6 as the benchmark and framework for any state policy regarding animal nutrients. That includes the provision which deals with state preemption.

I am aware that the Nutrient Management Advisory Board is working through some recommendations regarding certain regulatory changes. I believe that is the preferred alternative to a wholesale statutory change to Act 6. I look forward to the recommendations of that board.

I further support financial incentives, cost sharing, and research to take full advantage of the potential, as well as solving the problem, inherent in animal waste. Companies such as Synagro are working in other states and nations on processes that can literally turn pig slurry into clean water. Researchers at Penn State and the Monell Chemical Senses Center in Philadelphia are working hard on the odor problem. There are several emerging companies such as Integrity Nutrient Control, Chambersburg, that are developing innovative and cost-effective systems to provide for the on-farm disposal of animal waste. We need to encourage the development of all these opportunities.

Question 4: Finding profitable markets for Pennsylvania's agricultural products is a key to our success. You have publicly said you would champion Pennsylvania's agricultural value globally. Can you be more specific on your intentions and the potential long and short-term benefits you expect?

I will commit to making sure that Department of Agriculture maintains its current focus in the area of international trade and a presence abroad. Further, I will do the same in my role as governor by continuing to lead periodic trade missions on behalf of agriculture and other leading industries in the commonwealth.

We should not forget the tremendous domestic market potential for Pennsylvania producers. The USDA Economic Research Service estimates that consumer expenditures on domestic food approach $700 billion. As the ERS says, "Consumers will dictate the future course of the food system." My administration will work with both consumers and producers to take full advantage of markets, domestic and foreign, for Pennsylvania ag products.

As governor, I will:

• Expand marketing opportunities: Pennsylvania's farmers live within one day's drive of half the nation's population, uniquely positioned near large markets. Greater advantages can be taken of this situation.

For years, Philadelphia has been home to a marketing collaboration known as "The Book and the Cook." It is a showcase for world-renowned chefs, fine restaurants, and quality agricultural products from Pennsylvania. Philadelphia's Reading Terminal Market features "The Pennsylvania Store," a retail facility dealing exclusively in Pennsylvania agricultural products. Statewide, there's a "Simply Delicious" program coordinated by the Agriculture Department to provide a domestic market for Pennsylvania grown fruits and vegetables. Currently, 900 growers and 500 retailers are involved.

Pennsylvania's agricultural exports worldwide are valued at $1 billion and involve mainly mushrooms, Christmas trees, dairy products, and apples. The department attends and hosts countless international trade shows to encourage expanded exports. Its current budget for promotions is $1.379 million.

As governor, I will direct the Agriculture Department to expand these and other marketing initiatives. I will also encourage new programs to link growers and consumers directly, returning more of the food dollar to the producer while improving the health and nutrition of the consumer. And I will seek to expand current emergency food programs in the commonwealth with the dual benefit of alleviating hunger and widening the distribution of Pennsylvania produce. I will also help Pennsylvania farmers take better advantage of marketing opportunities abroad by surveying foreign demand for Pennsylvania products and promoting our products accordingly.

I will also make state government an exclusive market for Pennsylvania commodities by issuing an executive order requiring commonwealth agencies and institutions to buy homegrown produce first.

• Promote profitability for all farms: Agriculture in Pennsylvania is very diverse. Mushroom farms of Kennett Square, grape growers in Erie County, green-wrap tomatoes in Lackawanna County, tobacco in Lancaster County, poultry and hogs in the southeast, and dairy farms everywhere. The commonwealth ranks among the top five in the nation in the production of mushrooms, Christmas trees, milk and apples, which in recent years has led to exports of more than $1 billion of agricultural products worldwide.

As governor, I will open important economic development tools to production agriculture, allowing access to special funds like the Small Business First Fund. Today, Pennsylvania spends some $500 million on economic development programs, yet most of those dollars are closed to the largest industry in this state: agriculture. I will invest economic development dollars in agriculture.

Modern farming is dependent on expensive equipment. This is true of dairy farming, the state's principal agriculture enterprise. A dairy farm must have a herd of at least 200 to 300 cows to be viable with an investment of thousands of dollars per stall for efficient production with robotic milkers, automatic washers, and so forth. Yet the Commonwealth's Machinery Equipment and Loan Fund is closed to farmers. I support opening this program to farmers.

Question 5. Pennsylvania ranks #1 in the nation for farmland preservation, with more than 234,000 acres of farmland preserved throughout the state and a waiting list of more than 1,700 farms. However, because of an ever-growing population, there is an increasing demand for residential growth and associated recreational areas ("green area access"). Farmland preservation, residential growth and the public areas needed to accommodate that growth frequently conflict with one another. The first question, can you state more directly what role you would like for state and local governments to take to ensure that the farmland preservation successes continue and that "smart" residential growth and associated recreational areas occur without causing a conflict?

We must never forget that the best farmland preservation program is a healthy and robust agricultural economy that keeps farming profitable for those in it, and desirable for those who want to be the farmers of tomorrow. Preventing urban sprawl is also undeniably linked to promoting healthy cities such as Lancaster, Philadelphia and many others across our commonwealth. There are those who would choose to divide the citizens of Pennsylvania as rural verses urban. I refuse to do so.

No one can argue with the success of Pennsylvania's farmland preservation program. It was created by Governor Bob Casey, working with Lancaster County's own Sen. Noah Wenger and the late Rep. Sam Morris of Chester County. It has been honored not once, but twice, by the American Farmland Trust.

The proximity of many farms to large urban centers has driven up land values exponentially, making

"Basically" Farming

Helpful hints for new and existing farmers

PENNSTATE

College of Agricultural Sciences
Cooperative Extension - Southeast Region

SO YOU WANT TO FARM? WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW BEFORE STARTING OUT

Patricia A. Westenbroek
Penn State
Farm Management Agent

Thank you for your submissions to the "Basically Farming" column. They will help us better serve you in learning the basics of farming.

An opportunity presents itself, and you have the option of getting into farming. You're a young person who is driven to lead a farm life, or you are a person who once lived on a farm, thinking of returning, or you are a person who has property, wanting to make it more productive. You could also be a person who has always been interested in farm life and come to a point where you are wondering if you can make it a way of your life.

What should you know before starting out? "Farming looks mighty easy when your plow is a pencil, and you're a thousand miles from the corn field," as Dwight D. Eisenhower said in 1956. Farming takes a time commitment, a breadth of knowledge, and physical strength to make it work.

Starting in farming is difficult, at best. But where do you start?

To decide whether farming is right for you, you should ask yourself some basic questions and begin to develop a plan. You need to identify what you are interested in pursuing. Are you going into dairy or livestock business? Vegetables? Fruit? Diversified Farming? Full time? Part-time? The more specific you are about what you want to do, the easier it becomes to be able to figure out if it's possible. Talking with local experts, such as USDA representatives, extension, industry sales people, bankers, farming associations, and other farmers can help you make decisions before committing to your choice of operation. Visiting farms you admire and going to educational events are activities you should consider.

Planning is essential to your success — determining the who, what, where, when and how of your idea. Is the farm going to be a recreational activity or provide income? Will it provide enough income to meet your requirements? The action plan, financial plan, and marketing plan are all apart of your decision-making process. It's important to work through a planning process before a major action is made, such as buying land or building a structure.

Developing a business plan can help you and your advisers determine if your choice of operation is right for you.

Location, location, location! Do you need to buy land or is renting a better option while getting your feet wet? Does your municipality permit you to farm in that area? Do have right amount of land to meet your operation's requirements? Is the land suitable for the operation? Do improvements have to be made? Are the neighbors tolerant of farming? Choosing the right place can make all the difference, particularly if you are marketing products.

You may want to make a checklist of the equipment, supplies, inventory, and facilities you'll need to fully operate. Are there low-cost alternatives? Would leasing equipment or custom hiring be suitable? Are the facilities adequate? Get estimates on the costs of improvements and operational costs to begin to create a budget.

If you're making a product for sale, you will want a marketing plan to discover your pricing structure, distribution, product lines, advertising, etc.

As your making your plan, think of the personal investment and financial investment that you are making. How much time and physical effort are you willing to put into the operation? Do you have the experience to start with or do you need training? Are you willing to work for someone else to gain that experience? You may find that you will need to put your plans on hold or modify them. Also, you could find that you saved yourself a costly investment!

Swine Popular 4-H Project In Carbon County

DEANNA CUNFER
Carbon Co. Correspondent

PALMERTON (Carbon Co.) — In the past few years the membership of the Carbon County 4-H Livestock Club has grown tremendously. One of the most popular projects, especially for beginners, is the market swine project.

This year the club membership totals 33 — 19 of those completed the market swine project, bringing 66 entries to the Carbon County Fair for competition.

The event was judged by James Parlett, Airville, who raises Yorkshire, Duroc, and Berkshire hogs. The Parlett farm consists of 350 acres and also raises 80 Hampshire and natural colored ewes.

Starting the morning show with the fitting and showmanship competition, Parlett selected Christiana Graver, 12, as his grand champion fitter with reserve fitter honors going to Ashley Barry, 16, daughter of Guy and Priscilla Barry. Graver first topped the intermediate class with Barry being the first place winner of the senior fitting class.

In the showmanship competition, first-year member Angela Maleski, 14, Weatherly was selected as the grand champion showman with the reserve showman rosette going to Shawn Lenahan, 10, Franklin Township, another first-year member. Maleski and Lenahan first received the top and second place spots in one of the two beginner/first-year member classes. There were 13 exhibitors falling into this fitting and showmanship division proving to be a strong foundation for future competitions.

In reviewing the 10 weight classes, Parlett said he found a lot of good hogs at the show — something he didn't expect because Carbon County is not generally known to be a large agricultural or livestock area. For his grand champion market swine, Parlett selected the 236-pound Blue Butt gilt of Luke Graver. In making his selection, the judge described the champion as being a long-bodied hog, very clean over the top and the leanest of its class.

Staying with the top placers from the medium weight class, Parlett then selected the 238 Blue Butt barrow entry of Christiana Graver as the reserve grand champion market swine of the show.

Luke, 10, is a fifth-grade student at Lehighton Middle School and shows swine, market, and breeding sheep and dairy beef at the fair and will be again exhibiting swine at the Pennsylvania Farm Show. Christiana, 12, a seventh grade student at the same school also completed the market swine, market and breeding sheep and dairy beef projects. Like her younger brother, Christi will also be returning to Harrisburg this January to compete at the Pennsylvania Farm Show. They are the children of Paul and Diane Graver, Franklin Township. The Graver children are both members of the National Junior Swine Association and quickly admit they prefer swine over all the project animals they raise.

Pairs competition saw the entry of Colt Seltzer rising above the 17 entries to capture the blue ribbon.

The fair posted the following results:

PLANNING, PLANTING A TOP WHEAT CROP

John Rowehl
Regional Extension Agent-Grain Crops

A very good wheat crop this year and improvement in price has gotten the attention of grain growers this summer. While we cannot accurately predict what will happen in the coming year, we can brush up on the cultural practices we do this fall. To end up with a good wheat crop, planning and planting management this fall is critical.

Good quality seed of the best varieties is the place to start. Quality seed has good test weight, is clean of weed seeds, and does not carry seedborne diseases. Certified seed is always the safest bet to ensure this. If home grown seed is used, seed treatment to take care of diseases that may have formed on the grains this year is very important to prevent a problem in the crop. After the year we had, I would use seed treatment effective on loose smuts, seedborne scab, and seedborne glume blotch.

Variety test reports are available to help you choose the best ones. If you haven't selected them yet and can access the Web, you can go to this site to find reports from Penn State, Ohio State, and the University of Maryland; http://cumberland.extension.psu.edu/Agriculture/grainCrops.htm. If you need a paper copy, call your local Extension office (or me at 717-240-6500) to get one. Use the multiple year test averages in these reports for the most reliable information.

Corn and soybean crops are coming off earlier than normal this fall but you should still wait until the optimum period of Oct. 1-15 to plant wheat. Planting wheat too early increases the risk of powdery mildew and barley yellow dwarf virus infections. We don't think about the Hessian fly much, but you do avoid that insect by planting after that date as well. And winter annual weed pressure should be lower. Research in Oklahoma indicates that test weight will be lower if planted earlier than the optimum date there.

I don't think much wheat is planted back to back, but sometimes it is. This invites diseases such as Septoria, take-all and powdery mildew, particularly when old straw and chaff remain on the surface. Most wheat is planted following corn and soybeans. The red zone I would watch out for is wheat is planted no-till in corn fields with a lot of stalks on the surface. This results in more potential for head scab next year than if it were soybean ground or even corn ground with more of the stalks tilled in or under.

Fields testing low in phosphorus are not as scarce as some people think. To have a good wheat crop, make sure that you fertilize accordingly if any of yours are in that category. The pH is more critical for barley than wheat but don't take that as an excuse to let it drop down too low.

When seeding during the optimum time, 20 seeds per foot, in seven-inch rows is adequate. This is about 100 pounds per acre of seed with 15,000 seeds per pound. Uniform depth of planting resulting in even emergence is very important. If planting later than the end of the optimum period, increase the seeding rate to compensate. Ohio State recommends increasing the seeding rate by one pound per day starting eight days after the Hessian fly free date. If planting earlier, reread this article.

it more profitable for farmers to sell out to developers rather than continue farming. A land preservation program over the last couple of decades has sought to reverse this trend by offering to buy development rights from farmers in exchange for preserving their farmland at lower assessed values. Currently, 53 counties are participating in these programs, having preserved 1,600 farms covering more than 197,000 acres. We have become a model for the nation, with the most farms and farmland preserved. But funds for the purchase of agriculture conservation easements have been cut, leaving more than 1,000 farmers on the waiting list to preserve their farms. The American Farmland Trust has designated Pennsylvania as home to some of the most endangered farmland in the world.

Therefore, I will work to bring more dedicated funding for the purchase of conservation easements. I will pursue more flexible funding mechanisms for easement purchases, such as a plan to pay farmers by installments over 30 years rather than in a lump sum. I will work to take advantage of the new federal funds that will be made available for farmland preservation in the new Farm Bill. Beyond the funding issue, we also need to do everything we can to ensure that there are few, if any, administrative holdups at the county or state level. The decision to sell agricultural conservation easements is not made lightly by a farm family. It concerns me that they arrive at such an important decision and then are forced to wait and wait.

As Governor, I will direct Commonwealth agencies to adhere to Executive Order 1997-6, regarding agricultural land preservation policy. In 1999, the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation (PennDOT) had to be sued to prevent the agency from building a highway interchange without a hearing before the Agricultural Lands Condemnation Approval Board. That will not happen during my administration.

The second questions, how would you balance the need for growth and the protection of health and safety through the condemnation of farmland by public entities (schools, highways, projects, etc.) with the public investment made in these farmland resources?

In my administration, farmers will not have to fear their government.

Under the current administration, the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau was forced to go to court to protect a farmer and his land because the Department of Transportation tried to condemn it without a hearing of the Agricultural Lands Condemnation Approval Board. For many years, ALCAB has protected farmers from condemnation from one end of this state to the other. PennDOT tried to destroy it, in violation of state law. I will never let that happen.

I will reaffirm the executive order that calls on state agencies to consider farmland preservation when developing policy proposals or instituting state actions, and I will enforce it.

Finally, I couldn't help but notice the construction of the new Meat Animal Evaluation Center when I visited Ag Progress Days last month. It looks like it will be a great facility and no doubt it is sorely needed. But one has to wonder, why it is being moved from the current location to be built on some of the best farmland in Happy Valley?

Question 6: Any people in the food industry are concerned about the level of knowledge and insight the nonfarm public has about food origin, quality, and appropriate industry controls that exist to support food demand. While you support state funding for 4-H, FFA, and Ag in the Classroom, what ideas do you have to address the broader knowledge gap between agriculture and the public?

It is correct that I support continued and expanded funding for the 4-H, FFA, and Ag in the Classroom efforts. I also have committed to preserving and expanding the Rural Leadership Training program at Penn State University and the Ag Loan Forgiveness program at PHEAA.

I was proud to call for the restoration of the Ag and Rural Youth organization grants and very pleased to learn that the Department of Agriculture will follow through on Rep. Jeff Coy's request to fund the program with existing promotion and education funds. It was a very shortsighted decision by the current administration to eliminate that program in the first place.

Saul High School in the city of Philadelphia has the largest FFA chapter in the state. These are city kids, but chances are they know more about modern agriculture than most residents of our state. That has to change.

We do a good job of promoting agricultural products, but we would be well advised to start promoting agriculture itself. I will commit to doing just that. The Department of Agriculture maintains funds totaling more than $2 million for promotion and education. My administration will take a very hard look at using some of those funds to help the public understand and appreciate agriculture as an industry, and all that it means to our state and our world.

I am the only candidate in this race who has experience of using the office of the chief executive as a tool to promote, educate, and convince consumers to embrace one of the largest cities in the world. I can do the same for your industry.

Question 7: You have publicly supported a Special Session on property tax reform, which could have a significant impact on farm taxation and subsequent profitability. If elected governor, what ideal solution would you like to see implemented?

The American Farmland trust has done several studies that show farmers take back only about a dime for every dollar in local taxes that they pay. If any group deserves relief from the near $2 billion in property tax hikes in the last eight years, it's farm families.

As governor, I will begin uncoupling education funding from the property tax by dramatically increasing the funding the state provides local schools. This funding increase will allow communities to cut and cap for every homeowner the portion of local property taxes used to finance schools. This new funding will be generated from:

- Restructuring state government to ferret out waste and inefficiencies. In any large bureaucracy, there are significant cost savings to be found by streamlining and improving its operations. The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania is no exception. As detailed by Governor Ridge's 1996 IMPACCT task force study, there were and still are government reform efforts that could save the state almost $7.6 billion over five years. While the administration made some progress, there remains much to accomplish. As governor, I will continue the work begun by the Ridge Administration and scour the state government to eliminate fraud, waste, and duplication and streamline and improve operations. All rescued funds will be allocated to education.

As Philadelphia's Mayor, I launched a similar government reform program to close the city's budget gap without raising taxes. By making tough decisions, the Rendell Administration was able to close a $250 million budget gap — 11 percent of the $2.3 billion city budget — without raising taxes.

- Placing slot machines at Pennsylvania's racetracks. A study at Penn State University determined that $283 million of revenues would be created in Pennsylvania if 1,500 slot machines were permitted at each of the state's existing four racetracks. If, however, the number were increased to 2,500 machines per racetrack, as in our neighboring states of West Virginia and Delaware, state and local revenues could reach $469 million. Substantial additional revenues could be added if slots are also placed at a potential racetrack in Erie, where there is a dormant license. As governor, I will pursue legislation to legalize slot machines at Pennsylvania racetracks and dedicate 100 percent of additional state and local revenues to fund education, thus dramatically reducing the property tax burden on older Pennsylvanians.
- Redirecting revenues from recent cigarette tax increase. As governor, I will redirect a significant portion of the additional revenues generated from the recent increase in the state's excise tax on cigarettes to the costs of public education.

Question 8: One of the members wrote in, I farm in Chester County and I have a 500-cow dairy. What will I need to do differently in the future to comply with environmental laws and still stay in business?"

The answer to this question depends a great deal on what you are doing presently, but let me say this, from the perspective of state government.

A well-run farm is better for the environment than any strip mall, parking lot, or sub division. My plan for the environment calls for the preservation, not the persecution, of agricultural operations of all sizes and types.

If you are complying with current regulations and willing to work with entities such as the conservation district, you'll be fine. I want you to have more time to dedicate to your operation and your family, instead of wasteful worry on regulations and red tape.

Question 9: If elected governor, what three things will you make a priority the first 90 days in office that relate to production agriculture, and why?

I will staff the Department of Agriculture with qualified, experienced professionals who have worked with you and for you. They will be people who understand the needs and concerns of your industry and have experience in addressing those needs in the public domain.

I will convene a Special Session of the General Assembly with the goal of reducing your property taxes by 30 percent. I will do so because you and your neighbors have seen them rise by almost $2 billion in the last eight years.

In cooperation with the Animal Health Commission, I will seek an immediate, honest, and thorough review of the strengths and weaknesses of the animal health and diagnostic systems and infrastructure at the Department of Agriculture, the University of Pennsylvania, and the Penn State University. I will do so because, to a large degree, the future of animal agriculture depends on the competence of these facilities and the confidence that producers and consumers alike have in them.

Question 10: The current drought situation in our commonwealth brings the issue of water quantity to the forefront. Water quantity is a concern for many involved in production agriculture. What is your position on townships taking matters into their own hands in regards to regulating water withdrawal? Secondly, what kind of assistance, if any, will be available to producers who are experiencing severe drought conditions?

Water management is too important to be ignored as a statewide issue, yet that has been the case for far too long. Townships that are attempting to do so are only reacting to a void in statewide leadership on the issue. I believe water withdrawal is a statewide concern. I further believe, and I stated for the record at Ag Progress Days, that agriculture should be given a top priority as any water management plan is developed under my administration.

No segment of Pennsylvania's economy has been hit harder by recent droughts than the farming community. Many farmers have suffered huge losses, with some having to abandon their farms in search of other jobs. One of the most important things to happen after the drought of 1999 was the recognition that the commonwealth should take aggressive steps to encourage risk management by producers in the form of crop insurance. The General Assembly was wise to provide funding to supplement crop insurance premiums for producers. These subsidies have been successful as witnessed by the fact that the number of those insured has tripled. I believe it is very important to continue that program.

I also recognize the need for a comprehensive program to manage our precious water resources. New technologies must be explored, such as using permeable surfaces to pave ever-expanding parking lots, engineering flood controls to prevent excessive water runoff, and constructing stone-filled drains to take surface water down to the levels of depleted aquifers.

To assist local communities manage their water supply and water usage, as governor I will support the establishment of regional water management authorities similar to the Delaware River Basin Authority and the Susquehanna Valley Authority. These new regional authorities will set standards and make determinations for water usage, with a priority given for agricultural needs.

Question 11: Agriculture has not been considered a growth industry in Pennsylvania, nor has it been treated by state agencies equally in the distribution of preferred business development packages. If elected governor, how will you enable your cabinet officials to establish agriculture as a viable industry?

It all comes back to leadership from the top. I am the only man running for governor who has ever led as a chief executive or grown an economy. I was the first candidate to commit to opening up the state economic development programs to production agriculture. Our state spends more money (almost $500 million) than other on so-called economic development programs. Yet, we don't allow our top industry, agriculture, access to the funds in those programs. I will change that.

> "Modern farming is dependent on expensive equipment. This is true of dairy farming, the state's principal agriculture enterprise. A dairy farm must have a herd of at least 200 to 300 cows to be viable with an investment of thousands of dollars per stall for efficient production with robotic milkers, automatic washers, and so forth. Yet the Commonwealth's Machinery Equipment and Loan Fund is closed to farmers. I support opening this program to farmers."

Maryland Cows Top Eastern National Holstein Show

Shoremar S Alicia Named Supreme, Murphy Offspring Tops Sale

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — After gaining international renown as a 5-year-old in 2000, Shoremar S Alicia continued as an aged cow to create a sensation in the world of dairy exhibitions last week, taking both Holstein and supreme championship honors at the All-American Dairy Show.

The 7-year-old Excellent-95 Alicia is co-owned by Kingstead Farms, Damascus, Md.; Jeff Butler of Illinois; and Howard Binder of Colorado. She is housed on the farm of Ronald and Emily Heffner, Jefferson, Md.

Alicia's exceptional list of accomplishments includes being named world champion Holstein as a 5-year-old in 2000. In that same year, she was grand champion at the Royal Winter Show in Canada, grand champion at the New York Spring Show, top 5-year-old at the World Dairy Expo in Wisconsin, and people's choice All-American. She had previously been named All-Canadian twice — as a junior 2-year-old and as a 4-year-old.

Alicia's dam C Aitkenbrae Starbuck Ada led the way to greatness in the show ring. In 1990, Ada was named supreme champion at the All-American Dairy Show.

This week, Alicia traveled to the World Dairy Expo to again vie with other top cows from North America.

Kingstead Farms is owned by Douglas King and sisters Jane and Mary King. While no longer a milking operation, the family continues to raise Alicia's heifers on the farm.

Freundly-Acres Ljet Murphy, an Excellent-96 cow who will turn 8 years old in December, was named reserve champion in the Holstein Show. She is owned by the Gene and Kathy Iager Family of Fulton, Md.

Murphy's list of honors include being named unanimous All-American as a 4-year-old, and All-American aged cow in 2001 as well as top aged cow at the World Dairy Expo in 2001.

As an additional distinction at this year's All-American, Murphy's offspring — first choice female from four Comestar Lee pregnancies due next March — topped the Eastern Elite Holstein sale, bringing $10,000. The buyer was Donald Rottinghaus of Seneca, Kan.

A first choice female due in March out of Woodbine-ND JRJ Frosty and Comestar Stormatic sold for $8,100, second top sale price. Consignor was Rottinghaus Holsteins, Kan., and the buyer was New Direction Dairy, Lovington, N.M.

Yearling heifer Fradon Starbuck Pappie sold for $7,600, making her the high-selling live animal at the sale. She was consigned by Fradon Holsteins LTD of Ontario, Canada, and purchased by Steve Meyers of St. Thomas. Pappie's dam is Brigeen-N Black Jed P-ET and her sire is Hanoverhill Starbuck.

A March-born heifer calf consigned by Kevin Ehrhardt of Baldwin, Md., went for $6,100 to Cornell Kasbergen of California. The calf is out of Ehrhardt Astro Jody and Comestar Outside.

Also selling for $6,100 was Carlencrest Storm Carlene, consigned by Galestone Holsteins, Landisburg. Rodney and Lisa Meyers of Chambersburg bought this 4-year-old cow out of Carlencrest Broker Charlene and Maughlin Storm.

Altogether, the sale grossed $242,650 on 79 lots, with an average of $3,072.

Opening Ceremony Conducted At KILE

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) —The opening ceremony for the Keystone International Livestock Exposition (KILE) was conducted Thursday afternoon in the Small Arena at the Farm Show Complex.

Dennis Grumbine introduced the Hall of Fame winners this year, Ken and Ann Staver, Palmyra. Ken is a retired ag education teacher and Ann is a retired science teacher.

"All of our life we spent trying to get kids and animals together because we thought it was a good thing," said Ken Staver. "We found the value of working with young people and animals projects, and what it does for them."

Ken and Ann Staver were inducted into the Livestock Hall of Fame.

Dennis Grumbine, director of the Farm Show Complex for 18 years, "one of our own who understood what was needed to make Farm Show prosper," according to Harry Bachman, also received recognition for his efforts.

Mike Firestine, KILE treasurer, gave out the 4-H and FFA awards. Kelly Jo Bankert, Red Lion, received the 4-H award along with Kyle Fleener, Robesonia. Bankert is planning to attend Delaware Valley College. Fleener, a freshman at Penn State University, plans on obtaining a degree in agriculture business.

Regina Lehman, Mechanicsburg, was named an FFA award winner. Lehman plans on majoring in agriculture science at Penn State. Ryan Donough plans to major in agriculture business at Penn State.

Sam Hayes recognized 100 years of 4-H by bringing 4-H'ers from across the Commonwealth to the stage. This week also marks national 4-H week.

This year at KILE is the year of the horse, according to Ann Swinker, co-chair of KILE's horse committee. According to Swinker 1,055 horses have been entered in this year's show.

Dennis Grumbine, Farm Show director, was recognized for his contributions to the complex.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

cows and those with 500 cows and less. The report noted that over the period 1997-2001, there were fewer farms producing more milk. Much of the growth in the milk supply was from the larger farms. What was noteworthy about this report, however, was the huge difference in annual average milk sales per cow between these two groups. This is basically milk production per cow per year. This "production gap" averaged 3,753 pounds over the period 1997-2001.

Thus small farms, those with less than 500 cows, on average produced 3,753 pounds less from each cow when compared to their larger counterparts. I did not think this difference was that big. This may explain why large farms are growing and smaller farms are declining. It may also represent an opportunity for small dairy herds.

Maybe the NASS report was worth reading after all.

Artist Gives New Form, Function To Old Barn Boards

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — If you have some old lumber you're planning to burn, you might want to reconsider it. Those boards could have the chance for a new life — in a unique and beautiful piece of furniture.

Dan Dennis first began fastening together old wood and other relics about five years ago when his girlfriend said she wanted a TV cabinet. He went to work using "stuff we had laying around," including discarded barn boards and old window shutters.

The result was impressive enough that Dennis decided to keep doing it. Today, the enterprise has grown into his main livelihood, including sales to specialty shops in Philadelphia and Gettysburg and at local art shows.

"I like boards that most people would throw out," said Dennis, who keeps his lumber inventory and workshop in a small barn in Lititz. His materials are donated by the owners of neglected barns and dilapidated sheds, often viewed as more trouble than they're worth anyway.

Dennis sometimes uses hardwoods like oak, but prefers pine and other softwoods for their workability. Most of the boards he works with are more than 130 years old. He looks for unique features in the wood, such as carved dates, initials or images. Old paint is an asset.

"The boards I find most valuable are those with paint on them," Dennis said. In many of his pieces, several layers of various paint colors are revealed along with the grain of the wood.

Dennis trims a board with his table saw. Old rough-textured wood like this one will be transformed by sanding.

Dennis crafts a lot of freestanding cabinets with shelves because their versatility makes them a favorite of customers. These can serve as bookshelves, pantry cabinets or linen shelves to name a few of the possibilities. Many of the cabinets have doors, sometimes with unique features such as antique windows.

He builds pieces with more narrowly-defined uses, too, such as wine racks, desks and tables. Old barn doors are suited well for sanding down and being resurrected into table tops. He also makes picture frames.

Dennis accepts commissions — shops or individuals asking him to build a particular type of furniture piece. But these customers should be aware that unexpected results are inherent in Dennis's creative process.

"I need to tell people, if they do commissions, it might not turn out exactly the way they meant," he said. However, nobody has turned down a commissioned piece because it failed to please.

"Nine times out of 10 it turns out better (than their original plan)," Dennis said. Still, "I prefer stores that say 'Hey, do whatever you want.'"

Dennis sometimes incorporates old hardware like latches and hinges into his work. For a recent secretary desk, he used a rusted chain to support the swing-down top. When working with new nails, he rusts them first in an acid solution.

Boards grooved and riddled by insects through the years can contribute to furniture's uniqueness, although Dennis uses this kind of wood with discrimination. "Some people like insect damage, but I worry about (insects) still being there."

His shop consists of lumber storage, work space, and a few simple tools. An early 1950s-model Craftsman table saw that belonged to his grandfather handles all the long cuts. A belt sander, circular saw, hammer and drill do the rest.

"The sander is vitally important," Dennis said. Boards encrusted by grime and dust over the years take on a whole new aspect when the sanding reveals fresh wood grain under the surface. Tung oil, which Dennis rubs in as a varnish, protects the final product and gives it luster.

Dennis plans to have samples of his work on hand Nov. 2 and 3 at Art on the Farm, an annual display of art, crafts, and music in an 19th-century stone barn near Landisville.

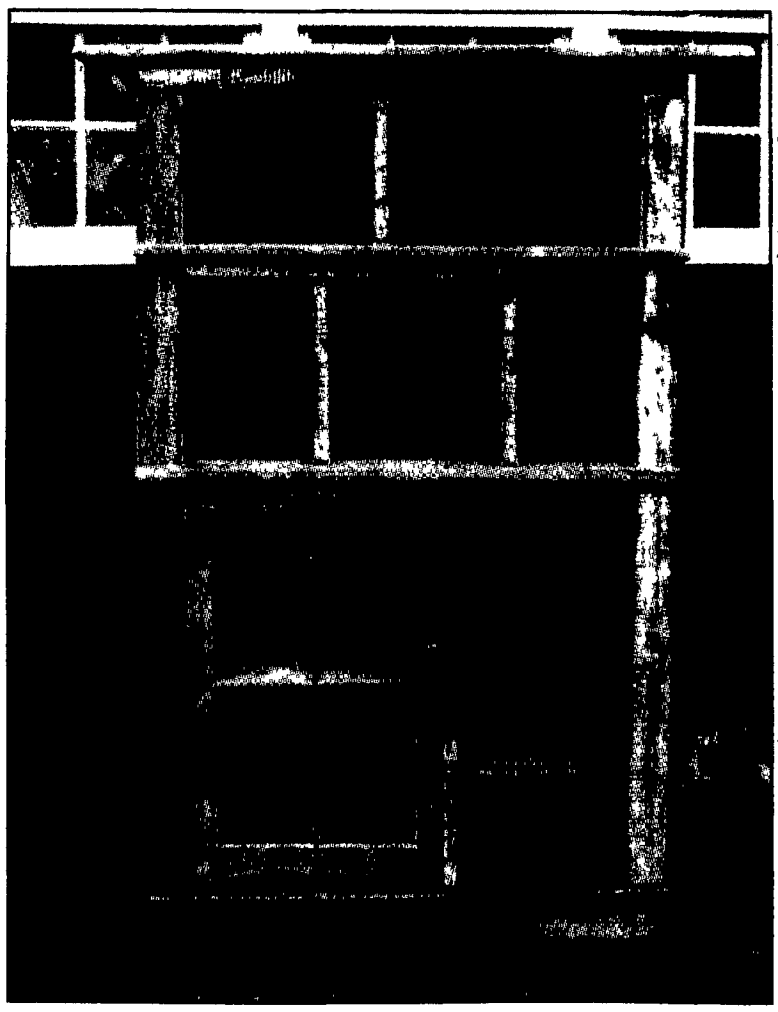
Dan Dennis salvages oak boards from a 19th century hog shed.

Dan Dennis checks his lumber inventory. He's looking for more wide boards at least 130 years old, preferably with weathered paint.

To learn more — or if you have some old boards around that could possibly be converted into distinctive furniture Dennis would like to hear from you. Contact him by phone at (717) 293-5118, e-mail lancobarnart@yahoo.com, or visit his website at www.lancobarnart.com.

Initials carved by someone many years ago are displayed on the door of this wine cabinet.

Dennis modeled this free-standing cabinet on an original piece he made in which the doors were crafted from a single piece of wood that had split in two.



Dennis fashioned this cabinet out of wood salvaged from the carousel originally at historic Rocky Springs Park, Lancaster.

On Being a Farm Wife
(and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

They glow like bright jewels, set against a dull, monotone background.

Sunset pinks. Neon oranges. Blood reds.

Zinnias are one of my favorite annuals. They're easy to grow, inexpensive, make few demands and tolerate a range of conditions, including the droughts which seem to plague our summers more often than not. Bouquets of zinnias' crayon-bright blooms brighten our kitchen for many weeks in late summer, usually with plenty to share with friends.

Most seasons, zinnias are direct-seeded in the vegetable patch, to be moved as needed to bare spots in the flower beds. So they were the logical choice for a bare stretch of border midway between the calf nursery and the house. If anything could tolerate the hot, dry conditions of a slightly raised bed next to heat-absorbing asphalt, zinnias would handle it. Daily cleaning of calf buckets 10 steps away was a plus for watering.

This humble flower patch fulfilled all that was expected of it, brightening the area for weeks with long-lasting, cheery color, asking for little but deadheading to keep more flowers coming. Despite having a serious case of powdery mildew, they continue to open blooms of lovely color.

I try to savor them each time I pass by, knowing that these jewel-toned beauties are fast-fading treasures. Their days are numbered, their tenure increasingly precarious with each passing day of frost-prone October.

Roses, too, have bounced back after languishing through choking heat and thirst. Though we think of them as dainty, delicate types, most roses are as tough as the thorned armor dotting their stems. Rarely do I snip their blooms without coming away poked, punctured or bleeding in some manner, testimony to their survival skills.

Tall, red salvias dawdled along all summer, doing little but pushing foliage to block the marigolds trying to peek around them, to the point where I grumbled never to plant them again. Coolness and some moisture have redeemed their reputation as they poked out flower stems so lush and thick the plants resemble explosions of fireworks frozen in mid-eruption.

Their time, too, is numbered. Along with petunias, wax begonias, and the morning glory stalks which have shinnied two-thirds of the way up the electric pole anchor wire. Not to mention each fresh tomato I gently carry in from the garden, a real comedown from the several five-gallon buckets per week they yielded just a few weeks ago.

Fading treasurers, lingering on borrowed time. But, while they diminish, others are already easing their way into this seasonal transition time.

The "girls" continue to delight in the lush green pasture that so readily grew with just a couple of inches of timely rain, confirming again how quickly nature responds with a little encouragement. Fall grains planted behind the corn silage harvest sprout in the cool moisture, oats for cutting in a few weeks to add to our somewhat skimpy winter feed supplies, wheat and barley for next year. Sad-looking alfalfa fields have perked up, too, with rain, promising a decent late cutting of hay, weather permitting.

When we emptied mother's house for sale late last winter, her collection of assorted seeds ended up at our home, some of it several years old and in need of use or disposal. Just pitching it seemed wrong. So, turnip seed from that assortment has now sprouted in the garden, along with a sprinkling of oak leaf lettuce, a tiny row of yellow string beans, radishes that appear to be all leaf and no roof, along with a couple of cabbage plants which may or may not grow into heads. (In gardening, you win some and you lose some.)

These, too, are treasures, at least if you enjoy all these vegetables as much as we do.

Zinnias may be fading, but gangly clumps of chrysanthemums prepare to throw a final, late fling of color over the garden. Dianthus, rejuvenated from the heat exhaustion, are covering themselves with sturdy stems bearing spicy-fragrant clusters of fuschia and red blossoms.

And, in one of the driest, hard-to-grow anything beds around the farm, a single bloom of pristine white has opened. One Easter lily, bobbing atop an eight-inch stalk.

Reminding us to enjoy our treasures in season.

And sometimes when we least expect them.

Broccoli, Brussels Sprouts, Cabbage, Cauliflower Harvest Under Way

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania growers are now harvesting the fall crop of "Simply Delicious" broccoli, Brussels sprouts and cauliflower while the cabbage harvest is continuing since it began in July. Broccoli, Brussels sprouts, cabbage, and cauliflower, all members of the cabbage family, prefer the cool fall weather to the extreme heat of summer. The harvest will continue throughout the fall.

Cabbage by itself ranks as the sixth most important Pennsylvania vegetable crop in terms of acreage. More than 1,800 acres are grown each year and are usually from late June into December. Pennsylvania ranks 14th in the nation in the production of cabbage.

Roughly 350 acres of broccoli and 230 acres of cauliflower, mostly in small acreages, are grown by growers across the state.

The cabbage family is also known as the Cruciferae family because their flowers are shaped like a cross. According to the Wellness Encyclopedia of Food and Nutrition of the University of California at Berkeley, cruciferous vegetables contain indoles — nitrogen compounds — that seem to protect against cancers of the stomach and large intestine. They also are generally high in fiber and antioxidants like vitamin C and carotenoids. Antioxidants neutralize the action of free radicals — unstable oxygen molecules — which promote cancer. Cruciferous vegetables also contain compounds that stimulate the release of anticancer enzymes.

Some people object to the odor produced by cooking cruciferous vegetables. The odor is caused by the release of sulfur compounds as these vegetables cook. While boiling cruciferous vegetables in large amounts of water in an open pot will minimize the characteristic strong cabbage taste, it maximizes the loss of nutrients. Steaming, microwaving or quick cooking in small amounts of water minimizes nutrient loss in the cooking process. Of course, broccoli, cabbage and cauliflower can all be enjoyed raw by themselves or in salads.

Dietary experts recommend including cruciferous vegetables in the diet regularly, at least several times a week. They also recommend a daily serving of a vegetable (or fruit) high in vitamin A, one high in vitamin C and one high in fiber. Broccoli fulfills all three requirements while cabbage and cauliflower fulfill the vitamin C and fiber requirement. Noted Lancaster County cookbook author Betty Groff offers the following recipes to help you enjoy "Simply Delicious" Pennsylvania cauliflower, cabbage, broccoli and Brussels sprouts.

Cauliflower And Celery Salad With Mustard Dressing

3 cups cauliflower flowerts
3 cups celery sliced ¼" thick
¼ cup sliced stuffed green olives
Mustard Dressing
Lettuce leaves
- Dash paprika
- Dash celery seed

Combine cauliflower, celery, and olives in a large mixing bowl. Add Mustard Dressing. Refrigerate for one hour. To serve, put on crisp lettuce leaves and garnish with a light dash each of paprika and celery seed. NOTE: When trimming cauliflower, cut very close to the top so the little buds will separate easily. Serves 6 to 8.

Mustard Dressing:
½ cup sour cream
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1 tablespoon mayonnaise
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon Krazy Salt
2 teaspoons white wine

In a small bowl, combine all ingredients. Beat with a wire whip until smooth and creamy. Let stand in refrigerator for one hour.

Cream Of Cauliflower Soup

1½ cups cooked cauliflower
3 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 cups rich chicken broth
2 cups milk
½ teaspoon onion salt
Freshly grated cheese (optional)
Paprika (optional)

Puree the cooked cauliflower and add the onion salt in food processor, blender, or food press. Set aside. In a heavy 2-quart saucepan, melt the butter. Blend in the flour, salt, and pepper, stirring until well-mixed. Remove from heat, and add chicken broth and milk, stirring with a wire whisk. Gradually add the cauliflower to the milk mixture. Simmer on low heat, stirring constantly to prevent sticking, until soup is the consistency desired — approximately 10 minutes. Serve piping hot, garnished with freshly grated cheese or a dash of paprika. Serves 6.

Cabbage Salad

1 firm head cabbage
2 medium sweet bell peppers (1 red and 1 green if available)
2 carrots
8 radishes
4 stems celery
2 cups sugar
½ cup herb or cider vinegar
¼ cup white wine
2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon celery seed
1 teaspoon mustard seed

Grate cabbage into a large mixing bowl. Clean peppers, dice, and add to the cabbage. Peel and grate the carrots, clean and slice the radishes, chop the celery, and add all to the cabbage. Toss lightly. Make syrup of sugar, vinegar, wine, salt, celery seed, and mustard seed, stirring together until the sugar is dissolved. Pour this syrup over the salad and toss. Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate for several hours or overnight. Serve with sandwiches or cold meats.

Red Cabbage With Plums, Bacon

¼ pound bacon
1 medium head red cabbage, coarsely shredded
1½ teaspoons salt
Freshly ground black pepper, to taste
2 tablespoons brown sugar
1 tablespoon vinegar
12 damson, or Italian prune plums, pitted and chopped

Fry the bacon in a large heavy skillet until crisp. Remove and drain on paper towels. Fry the cabbage in the bacon fat for three minutes, stirring constantly. Add the salt, pepper, sugar, and vinegar and cover. Reduce the heat to medium low and simmer five minutes, then stir and add the plums. Cover again. Reduce the heat to low and simmer for 20 minutes. Garnish with the crumbled bacon and serve. Good with roast pork, goose, or pheasant.

Variation: Use chopped apples instead of plums. Serves 6.

Brussels Sprouts With Chestnuts Or Pecans

2 pounds small Brussels sprouts
2 cups water
½ teaspoon salt
6 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 tablespoon granulated sugar
1 cup boiled or canned chestnuts or pecans (do not use water chestnuts)
⅓ cup seasoned beef broth
Freshly ground black pepper

Clean and trim the sprouts. (If freshly picked, some people like to soak them in cold salted water for 15 minutes to remove any insects.) Place the sprouts, water, and salt in a large saucepan, cover and cook until tender, about eight minutes. They should not fall apart, but give a bit when squeezed. Drain. Melt three tablespoons of the butter in a large, heavy skillet and saute the sprouts over medium heat until light green, about five minutes. Pour into a heated serving dish; keep warm. Melt the remaining butter in the same skillet, add the sugar and stir over medium heat until lightly caramelized, about three minutes. Add the chestnuts or pecans and stir until golden brown, about four minutes. Add the beef broth; simmer a bit, still over medium heat; check for seasonings, then pour over the sprouts. Top with pepper and serve immediately. Serves 4 to 6.

Broccoli Souffle

1½ pounds broccoli buds
5 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon minced onion
2 teaspoons dried chervil
½ teaspoon dried tarragon
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
¼ teaspoon paprika
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
3 tablespoons all purpose flour
1½ cups milk
3 large eggs, separated

Place the broccoli buds in a large saucepan and steam until tender, no more than three minutes. Melt 2 tablespoons of the butter in a large heavy skillet or saucepan over medium heat. Add the broccoli, onion, chervil, tarragon, Worcestershire, paprika, salt, and pepper, and saute for four minutes or until thoroughly heated. Remove from the heat and let cool slightly. In a 1½-quart saucepan, melt the remaining butter and gradually stir in the flour with a whisk over medium heat, stirring until smooth and bubbly, about two minutes. Slowly add the milk and cook about three minutes or until thickened. Beat the egg yolks. Remove the milk mixture from the heat and whip in the yolks. Fold it into the broccoli mixture. Beat the egg whites until stiff and fold into the warm mixture. Pour into a buttered 1½-quart ring mold, bundt pan, or baking dish. Place it in a pan with one inch of water and bake in a preheated 350-degree Fahrenheit oven for approximately 45 minutes or until a knife inserted in the deeper part of the souffle comes out clean. Work the point of a knife around the outer edge to loosen the souffle and invert it onto a heated serving dish. Do not remove the mold immediately — let the souffle come out gradually. Serves 4 to 6.

Variation: Before serving, fill the center of the baked souffle with any sauteed or steamed vegetables.

Corn Souffle: Substitute 4 cups corn kernels for the broccoli. For a fine, light, souffle, puree the corn in a food processor or blender.

Carrot Souffle: Substitute 1 pound carrots, peeled and coarsely chopped for the broccoli. Cover with water in a saucepan, bring to a boil and then simmer over medium heat until tender, about 10 minutes. Add ½ teaspoon chopped fresh mint with the other herbs.

The following recipe won first prize at the "Simply Delicious" Vegetable Quick Bread contest at the 2001 Philadelphia County Fair.

Broccoli Cheese Bread

1 stick butter melted
2 eggs, beaten
1 cup milk
1 cup all-purpose flour
1 cup corn meal
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
¼ cup grated romano cheese
1 cup grated cheddar cheese
2 cups cooked fresh broccoli

Preheat oven to 350 degrees Fahrenheit. Grease and flour a 9x5x3-inch pan. Beat butter, eggs and milk together. Sift all the dry ingredients together and add to the liquids. Stir in cheddar cheese and broccoli. Bake for one hour. Remove from oven and cool. By Gwynn Gaines, Philadelphia.

Five-Acre Corn Contest Offers A Harvest Of Information

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

SCHAEFFERSTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — Entering and winning the Pennsylvania Five-Acre Corn Club Contest may not necessarily be about winning.

For corn grower Steve Wenger his goal and emphasis centers on the information he can glean from the results.

"I don't enter the contest to win," he said. "I enter the contest because I can look for strengths or know what I need to improve.

Steve took home a second place in the shelled grain non-irrigated tilled class in the 1998-2000 three-year average award division with a yield of 220.8 bushels per acre and a plant population of 37,636 using NK N82J6.

Additionally during a recent meeting members of the Pennsylvania Corn Growers Association voted

Nat. Pork Board

Cranberry and pecan-crusted rack of pork offers gourmet appeal but is easy to make.

Featured Recipe

Today's pork isn't the meat that inspired phrases such as "fat as a hog" and "eat like a pig."

Pork has an average of 31 percent less fat, 14 percent fewer calories, and 10 percent less cholesterol than the pork your parents and grandparents ate when they were young.

In fact eight cuts of pork provide less than 180 calories and 9 grams of fat per 3-ounce cooked serving. Compare this to skinless chicken thigh, which has 178 calories and 9.3 grams of fat per 3-ounce serving.

Pork has a high level of nutrients for its calories. Pork provides protein, iron, zinc, thiamin, riboflavin, niacin, and vitamin B12, which is only found in animal products.

Pork's versatile flavor makes it great for a variety of dishes.

The National Pork Board understands the hectic schedules of busy families, so they offer time-saving meal solutions that don't compromise on taste or good nutrition. Visit the Website www.otherwhitemeat.com.

Bust menu boredom right in the chops with this pork recipe. Perfect for guests — this recipe from the National Pork Board serves 8.

CRANBERRY & PECAN-CRUSTED RACK OF PORK

Brining solution:
1½ quarts cranberry juice
6-ounces gingerale
9 tablespoons salt
8-9 pounds center cut pork rack, frenched

Combine juice, gingerale, and salt. Cover pork with cranberry liquid. Refrigerate overnight.

Cranberry paste:
4-ounces dried cranberries, pureed in blender with a little water until smooth

Pecan Crust
8-ounces pecans toasted, ground
8-ounces plain bread crumbs
3-ounces clarified butter, divided
2-ounces fresh thyme leaves, chopped

Combine pecans, crumbs, 1½-ounce butter, and thyme. After pork has been brined, remove from liquid and pat dry. Discard liquid. Heat a large saute pan until hot, add 1½-ounces clarified butter, and sear the rack of pork on both sides. Place the pork on a meat rack. Spread the cranberry paste on the pork and top with pecan crust. Cover with foil and bake 325 degrees for about 1½ hours or until 140 degrees. Remove foil about 10-15 mintues before pork is done to brown the pecan crust. Allow pork to rest 15 minutes before slicing.

When ready to serve, slice rack of pork into eight portions and place each on a plate. Sauce each plate with cranberry pork jus. Serves 8.

Out of Your Gourd
Pumpkin, Winter Squash

Dad always grows some kind of squash or gourd in the garden. One year he grew lots of birdhouse gourds (we are still using them for fall decorations and birdhouses). Most years he grew a few "field pumpkins" for carving into jack-o-lanterns. He also raised acorn or butternut squash. Mom would cut them in half, add brown sugar and butter and bake.

Squash and pumpkins are common names for plants in the gourd family. This time of year they are flowing into local supermarkets, farmer's markets and roadside stands. Acorn, Carnival, Delicata, Hubbard and, of course, Lancaster County's Neck Pumpkins are in abundance no matter where you look this time of year. Pumpkin varieties are many; large ones are most often used for decorations. Small "pie pumpkins" are used for cooking.

Native Americans dried strips of pumpkin and wove them into mats. They also roasted long strips of pumpkin on the open fire and ate them. One version of the first pumpkin pie occurred when colonists sliced off the pumpkin top, removed seeds and filled the insides with milk, honey and spices. Then the pumpkin was baked in hot ashes.

Dark yellow vegetables like pumpkin and winter squash not only taste great, but also are packed with nutrients. One serving of cup solid pack pumpkin or winter squash provides you with five times the U.S. RDA for Vitamin A. It also contains about 10 percent of the minimum requirement for potassium, packs lots of fiber, and is relatively low in calories. A half cup of cooked or canned pumpkin or winter squash contains only 40 calories if fat and sugar are kept to a minimum.

Fresh pumpkin can be substituted in any recipe that calls for winter squash.

Select winter squash and pumpkins for eating that are heavy for their size, have shiny skin and no cracks, bruises or decayed spots. The stem should be attached. Avoid any with a soft spot on the stem end.

Store winter and squash in a cool (50 60 F.) dry area. They will keep for several months if they are mature and the stem is attached. Refrigeration may change the flavor and texture.

When a recipe calls for pureed pumpkin, an easy way to prepare it is to cut it in half, remove the seeds and place upside down on a baking sheet and bake at 350F until the pulp is tender. Scoop out pulp and mash with a potato masher or puree in a food processor. Figure about 1 pound of raw, untrimmed pumpkin or squash for each cup of cooked/pureed pulp. If you want to freeze for later use, measure in one cup portions and place in rigid freezer containers or freezer bags. Freeze for up to one year. Puree can be used in recipes calling for the same amount of solid pack canned pumpkin. Do not freeze raw winter squash or pumpkin.

Besides pie, pumpkin and squash can be used in a variety of dishes: Add to hashed meats with apples, pears, or other fruits. Combine with rice and minced green pepper in a thick cheese sauce. Add pureed carrots, sliced onions and leeks, chopped celery and parsley to pumpkin soup or make a pumpkin souffl with white sauce, eggs and cheese.

Cooked pumpkin and squash products should be stored in the refrigerator. Pumpkin pie is a custard pie and needs to be refrigerated.

Many families like to roast pumpkin seeds when they are making jack-o-lanterns. Wash seeds well. Spread in a single layer on a baking sheet to dry. Roast for 20 30 minutes at 375F. Dot with butter and brown for 5-10 minutes at 400F. Stir often until toasted. Watch carefully. Sprinkle with salt, cool and serve.

For additional information on pumpkin and winter squash contact your local Cooperative Extension office and ask for the Enjoy Five-a-Day Variety Squash and Pumpkin publication.

QUESTION — Luci Essig is looking for a recipe for green tomato mincemeat.

QUESTION — David Nissley, Lancaster, requests a recipe for chocolate whoopie pies made with cake mix that are light and fluffy like the ones sold at Root's Market, Manheim.

QUESTION Eleanor Heinsey, Denver, would like a recipe to make green tomato chutney relish. She also mislaid the recipe for Pineapple Carrot Cake that had been printed in this column. She writes that it was very good and she would like it reprinted. Anyone have that recipe?

QUESTION — A reader would like recipes for hot dog relish and other relishes to can.

QUESTION — Susan Mineitsch is looking for a German apple cake recipe published in this column several years ago. The streusel, she remembers, stays at the top of the cake, instead of dropping down like some apple cake recipes she tried. The recipe she remembers requested buttermilk (not sour milk) and all-purpose (not cake) flour.

QUESTION — A fairly new homemaker wants recipes that are easy but taste wonderful to serve to guests. She would also enjoy any pointers to help entertain guests with ease.

QUESTION — Anna Bryan, Oxford, N.J., wants a recipe for pickled red cabbage.

QUESTION — A reader wants recipes to use end-of-season produce.

QUESTION — How about some recipes for dried apple slices and other ways to use an abundance of apples?

QUESTION — Readers would like recipes for preparing pumpkin and squash dishes to serve as a vegetable or main course.

QUESTION — A Leola reader wants a recipe to make beef gravy like that served with Salisbury steak in restaurants.

QUESTION — A reader from Lebanon wants a recipe for pizza sauce that tastes like the Ragu brand.

QUESTION — Penny Haber from Bucks County writes that for several years she has used a Victoria Squeezo Strainer to prepare her tomatoes for canning. She has also tried to use it to prepare strawberries and raspberries for jelly making but the proportions have turned out wrong. She would appreciate if readers who have successfully prepared fruit this way send instructions and the proportions of sugar, fruit pectin, and fruit they used.

QUESTION — Gail Silveira would like a recipe for a corn, shrimp soup, which she recalls had been printed in a previous issue. Anyone have the recipe to which she is referring?

QUESTION — Eva Burrell, Glen Gardner, N.J., wants to know how to make filet of beef on the grill by using wet newspapers and encasing meat in a paste made with kosher salt and water. Years ago, the Burrells used this method but can't remember exactly how it was done or the time required to cook per pound. This made the best filet of beef Eva has ever tasted and she would like to use it for several cookouts. If we do not receive a response to this within the next two weeks, we will assume our readers do not know the answer and drop the request.

ANSWER — A reader wanted recipes for zucchini relish to can. Thanks to Martha Lapp, Peach Bottom, for sending this recipe.

Zucchini Relish

10 cups zucchini (ground through coarse blade of food grinder)
4 cups onions, minced
2 cups red or green peppers, chopped
4 tablespoons salt

Mix and let stand overnight. Drain and wash off. Mix together:

1¼ cups vinegar
1 cup water
6 cups sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
2 tablespoons celery seed
1 rounded teaspoon nutmeg
1 rounded teaspoon dry mustard
1 rounded teaspoon turmeric

Add to zucchini and cook 30 minutes. Put into hot jars and seal.

Note: Less sugar may be used and vinegar diluted to suit taste. I use 3 cups sugar.

ANSWER — A Leola reader wants a recipe to make homemade French vanilla coffee creamer. Thanks to Lee Laverty, Mt. Joy, for this recipe.

French Vanilla Instant Coffee Mix

1 cup instant coffee, pulverized
1 cup dry instant coffee creamer
1 cup powdered milk
1½ cups sugar
½ cup Nestle's Quick
½ cup crushed buttermint candies
1 tablespoon vanilla extract
½ vanilla bean

Mix first five ingredients together. Slowly add the vanilla extract to the first five ingredients, mixing well with hands, or working through sifter (to mix the moisture evenly in the dry ingredients). Add the crushed buttermints, mix well.

Slit the ½ vanilla bean open lengthwise, and scrape the seeds into the above mixtures, again working the seeds in with your hands, so they are well distributed. Add the ½ vanilla pod to above mix. Store in sealed jar. Vanilla pod can be reused later.

ANSWER — Finally a reader sent in an answer for Dave Wilder, Gladwyne, who grows lingonberries in Berks County. He wanted to know uses for this Old World fruit.

Lingonberry Souffle

¾ cup lingonberries
¼ cup water
1½ cups sugar, divided
2 oranges, zest only
5 egg whites
1 tablespoon orange-flavored liqueur

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Butter a 1-quart souffle dish and sprinkle it with sugar. Make lingonberry sauce by cooking the berries with ¾ cup sugar and the water until thickened (about 25 minutes). Puree through food mill or sieve. heat puree just until it starts to bubble, remove from heat and add orange zest.

Beat the egg whites until they reach soft peaks, then slowly add the remaining ½ cup sugar while continuing to whip until stiff. Stir them into the hot puree until evenly blended. Spoon into souffle dish and bake 20-25 minutes.

Marsala And Lingonberry Sauce

1 tablespoon shallots
1 bottle Marsala
1 pint lingonberries
½ cup reduced chicken stock
2 tablespoons butter

Saute the shallots in a pan until they begin to turn brown. Deglaze the pan with one-third of the wine and reduce by two-thirds. Add the berries and chicken stock, reduce heat to a simmer. When mixture is reduced by half through cooking evaporation, add butter and season with salt, pepper, and a splash of wine.

Lingonberry Pie

3 cups fresh lingonberries
½ cup water
1 cup sugar plus 1 teaspoon
Pie crust for 8-inch pie and lattice

Preheat oven to 450 degrees. Place washed berries, water, and 1 cup sugar in saucepan. Boil about 10 minutes or until berries are slightly tender. Pour into unbaked 8-inch pie shell. Top with lattice pastry and sprinkle with remaining sugar.

Bake at 450 degrees for 15 minutes, reduce heat to 325 degrees for 15-20 minutes or until crust is golden brown.

Duck Breasts In Lingonberries And Red Wine

3 whole duck breasts; boned (about ⅓-1 pound each)
1 coarse salt and pepper to taste
½ teaspoon olive oil
1 cup chicken broth
½ cup lingonberries
2 tablespoons red wine

On a work surface, cut duck breasts in half lengthwise. Trim any extra fat and skin from around the meat on each breast. With a sharp knife, score the skin three times diagonally without piercing the meat. Sprinkle all over with salt and pepper.

Brush one large or two medium-sized nonstick skillets with olive oil. Place the breasts, skin side down, in the skillet over high heat. Saute, pressing down on the breasts with the back of the spatula, until they are well browned, about 5 to 6 minutes. Turn and brown the second side for about 3-4 minutes, for rare meat. If the pan gets too hot, reduce the heat to medium. Remove the breasts to a plate and cover to keep warm until serving. Pour off the fat and repeat with the remaining breast.

Discard all the fat in the pan and wipe it out with a paper towel. Place the skillet over medium heat; add broth along with any duck juices that accumulated in the plate. Boil for one minute, reduce heat to medium and stir in the lingonberries and wine. Cook about seven minutes or until slightly thickened, stirring occasionally.

To serve, slice the warm duck breasts thinly on the diagonal. Fan the slices out on a serving platter and spoon the warm sauce over the top. Serve immediately.

Serves 6-8. Per serving (based on 8): 441 calories, 37 g fat, 107 mg cholesterol.

Ligonberry Nut Bread

2 cups sifted flour
1 teaspoon salt
1½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
1 cup sugar
1 beaten egg
¼ cup melted butter
2 tablespoons hot water
¾ cup orange juice
1 cup fresh ligonberries
½ cup chopped pecans
1 tablespoon grated orange rind

Sift all dry ingredients into a large bowl and set aside. In another bowl, combine egg, butter, hot water, and orange juice and rind. Mix at medium speed for one minute. Slowly add dry ingredients and continue to mix at low speed until well blended. Batter will be very thick. By hand, stir in ligonberries and nuts. Pour batter into a greased loaf pan lined with well-greased wax paper. Bake in 325 degree oven for one hour and 15 minutes. Test with cake tester, if it comes out clean, it is done. Cool on wire rack for 15 minutes, then remove from pan and cool on rack. When completely cooled, wrap in wax paper and store 24 hours before serving.

"Ask For Pennsylvania Apples Every Time"

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — On behalf of Gov. Mark Schweiker, Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes announced that the Department of Agriculture and the Pennsylvania Apple Marketing Program are co-sponsoring a 51-billboard campaign urging Pennsylvanians to "Ask for Pennsylvania apples every time."

"I encourage all Pennsylvanians to 'Ask for Pennsylvania apples every time,'" Sec. Hayes said. "Our homegrown apples come in delicious varieties that can be enjoyed throughout the year."

The billboards are an extension of the Simply Delicious campaign and can be found throughout Pennsylvania beginning this month.

During the past seven years, the Department of Agriculture has worked in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Apple Marketing Program to provide matching grant funding for effective marketing and promotional tools to market Pennsylvania apples.

Board chairman Dave Benner said, "The Pennsylvania Apple Marketing Board and apple growers are very appreciative of the support the state Department of Agriculture has offered to the apple industry. This support helps leverage the funding provided by growers and makes a real difference in the marketplace." In an effort to focus attention on Pennsylvania apples, the Pennsylvania Apple Marketing Board developed the "Ask for Pennsylvania apples every time" message to encourage consumers to buy local. This slogan is being used in conjunction with the Department of Agriculture's very successful and visible "Pennsylvania Produce — Simply Delicious" program.

The Simply Delicious campaign was launched in 1998 to promote Pennsylvania produce. With more than 3,000 growers, more than 30 different vegetable crops are produced within the Commonwealth.

Among Pennsylvania's top varieties of apples are: Gala, Red Delicious, Golden Delicious, Empire, Jonagold, Stayman, Winesap, Rome, Fuji, Braeburn and Granny Smith.

The Pennsylvania Apple Marketing Board, established in 1968, works with the Department of Agriculture to promote Pennsylvania apples and apple products. The program is governed by a board of Pennsylvania apple growers, representing over 250 apple producers. For recipes and educational materials, visit www.paapples.org.

Food Drying Part 3
Fruit Rolls, Leathers

The Well Preserved news column is prepared by Lancaster County Cooperative Extension. It includes food preservation information and questions.

Fruit rolls, also known as fruit leathers, are a favorite snack of children. Adults are also known to enjoy them. They are usually made from pureed fresh fruit which has been dried and rolled and are often cut into snack size pieces. Some are made from canned fruits and there are even some made from vegetables.

Foods with a high pectin content have a good texture when dried. Lower pectin fruits can be combined with high pectin apples to make good leathers. Ripe or slightly over ripe fruits can be used. Fruits that are very liquidy should be combined with firmer fruits to have more body. Canned or frozen fruits can be used if the liquid is drained. Applesauce can be used directly from the can.

It will take about two cups of fruit for each 13x15-inch piece of fruit leather. Wash fruits or berries in cool water. Remove peel, seeds, and stem and cut away any bruised or spoiled parts. Puree fruit in a blender until it is very smooth. Some fruits will need a little added liquid in order to blend properly. Use the smallest amount of liquid possible because you will need to remove the liquid during the drying process. If desired, apples can be cooked into a sauce and put through a food mill or sieve for a smooth consistency. Berries with large seeds can also be heated and put through a fine sieve to produce a smoother pulp. Add two teaspoons of bottled lemon juice or ⅛ teaspoon ascorbic acid for each two cups of light-colored fruit to prevent darkening.

Fruits are naturally sweet and the drying process intensifies the sweetness so that added sugar is not generally needed. When additional sweetening is wanted, light corn syrup or honey can be used at the rate of one or more tablespoons for each quart of puree. However, this will make the leather slightly more sticky. Adding sugar to a leather leads to crystallization and tends to made the leather brittle during storage. Artificial sweeteners with a saccharin base can be used, but aspartame sweeteners may lose their sweetness during drying.

For a special treat sprinkle coconut, chopped dates, nuts, raisins, granola, poppy, sesame, or sunflower seeds over the fruit rolls before they are dried. Fruit rolls with these garnishes should be stored in the refrigerator or freezer.

To make a fruit roll, spread plastic wrap on a baking sheet, smooth it out, and spray it lightly with a vegetable spray. This will help to prevent sticking. Do not use waxed paper or aluminum foil. Some dehydrators come with a specially designed tray for making leathers. Pour the puree onto the prepared surface about ¼ to ⅛ inch thick. Use a long flat spatula to spread the puree evenly. Dry at 130F to 140F until the fruit feels leather-like and is pliable. There should be no sticky spots on top or underneath the puree.

Test for dryness by touching the center of the leather; there should be no indentation. The length of time it takes to reach this stage depends upon the type and amount of fruit used, the humidity in the air, and the type of dryer or oven being used. Some leathers dry in as little as four hours and others will take over ten hours in a dehydrator. It may take up to 18 hours in an oven. Remove the leather from the tray while it is still warm and roll it up. You may want to cut the leather into smaller pieces and wrap them individually in plastic wrap like a piece of candy. Store individually wrapped pieces of fruit leather in air-tight and moisture proof containers. Chances are you won't have any left to store. However, it will keep up to one month at room temperature and may be frozen for up to a year.

Leathers can even be made from yogurt. Spread homemade or store bought yogurt about ¼-inch thick on prepared trays. Dry at 130F. for approximately 12 to 14 hours.

Some vegetables are dried like leathers and then reconstituted for use in sauces and soups. A leather made of tomato puree can be reconstituted to make tomato sauce or paste according to the amount of water added. Just dry your homemade tomato sauce at 140F. until crisp. Then powder the mixture in a blender. Combine equal parts of the tomato powder and water to make tomato paste. To make tomato sauce, use one part powder and three parts water. Tomato soup can be made using one part powder, one part water, and two parts cream. Reconstituted tomato juice is made using one teaspoon tomato powder and ½ cup water.

Dear Twig: I saw a red fox yesterday. My teacher says there's a gray fox, too. What can you tell me?
Shy and secretive, gray foxes live in forests or in brushy, overgrown places. So they're usually harder to see than red foxes, which live where it's a bit more open — in fields, on farms, even in suburbs — and sometimes are pretty bold.
The gray fox and red fox are two different species: Urocyon cinereoargenteus (the gray fox) and Vulpes vulpes (the red fox).
But what really sets the gray fox apart is that it's able to climb up trees! It's the only member of the dog family that can do this.
Gray foxes climb trees to hunt, hide and rest. They grip the trunk with their front legs — "Urgh!" — then push themselves up with their long back claws. "Hup! Hup! Hup!" They come down in reverse — tail first — which is a problem only if you're over a porcupine.
Parts of a gray fox are actually rusty-red. And red foxes sometimes are black, blue or silver. Sometimes it's confusing! Here's a good tip for telling them apart: The tip of a gray fox's tail is black. The tip of a red fox's tail is white.
Another good tip is don't sit on porcupines!

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

Today, Oct. 5, is the birthday of my husband's aunt. She was a maiden lady who spent a lot of time in other people's homes taking care of their children. In doing this she traveled quite a bit. She lived to be more than 100 years old, and I am privileged to have some of her diaries.

So, I'll share a few entries from the fall of 1902 and 1910. Her father bought peaches for $1 a bushel. On Oct. 5 they boiled 20 crocks of pear butter. Today many people do not even own a "crock." And, she noted how much butter they churned in one month — 43 pounds, 47 pounds, and 46 pounds. I'm surely glad that I did not need to do that as I've had my share of churning butter in order to get a monetary return from milk.

They put beets, turnips, carrots, parsnips, radishes, and salsify in the cellar. That is a nice variety of vegetables. Also noted is the fact that they "filled the oven with fruit" which I suppose meant that it was dried for winter use.

It is mentioned that "Jonas Nissley came to smell water." This might sound odd to some people but I know that she meant that he was trying to find a good place to dig a well. Some people appear to have a knack for finding a good spot to dig for water. Many used a peach branch while others held pliers in their hands.

In the fall they traveled to Martic Forge for chestnuts. And, it was the time that they moved from the summer kitchen to the winter one in the big house. The sewing circle met at their house. Some aunts came to their house to "help to rug." Now that I do not understand. What kind of a rug were they working on? She merely says that it was a red-shaded rug.

It is interesting to read how they prepared for winter 100 years ago in 1902.

Irradiated Foods Available — Will Consumers Pay More, Accept?

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Ground beef recalls inject scary news into beef producers and consumers.

But food borne outbreaks are not limited to beef. Outbreaks have been identified in raw vegetables, fresh fruits, seafood, and cheeses. An estimated 76 million Americans suffer from food borne illness annually, and 5,000 may die.

Scientists have found a way to kill those potentially harmful organisms and say recalls can be a thing of the past.

The method is irradiation, a process of exposing foods to very high energy electrons to keep microorganisms from reproducing and spoiling foods.

But will consumers accept the method and the higher costs required to administer the process?

Yes, believes Ron Eustice, executive director for the Minnesota Beef Council, the state that leads the country in promoting the benefits of irradiated ground beef.

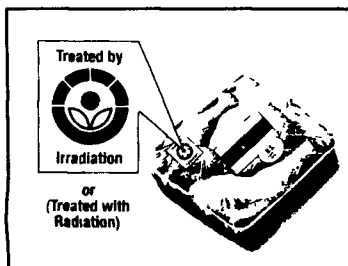
But opponents claim irradiated foods are unhealthy and cancer causing.

"Wild claims," Eustice counters. "They base their claims on myths not on scientific fact."

Eustice points out that irradiation has been approved by the Food and Drug Administration, American Medical Association, the USDA, and numerous other health agencies.

An overwhelming body of scientific evidence demonstrates that irradiation does not harm the nutritional value of food and has no harmful side effects.

In fact, you are probably already eating some foods that have undergone the irradiation process such as spices, some produce shipped in by other countries, and many hospitals and several chain restaurants serve irradiated beef.



The required identification symbol (Radura) and the words "irradiated for food safety" must be clearly displayed on packaging of irradiated food.

Although FDA has approved irradiation, it is considered an additive and food that has undergone irradiation must be clearly labeled except spices. (See the required symbol illustrated on this page).

The process does add costs to the finished product. Some consumers are willing to pay more for the assurance that they need not worry about food-bourne illnesses, but others balk at the idea of paying more for food that they consider carries little risk.

"Consumers deserve a choice," Eustice said. "Present the facts, provide irradiated foods, and allow the consumer to decide whether or not they want it."

Eustice was one of the speakers at several workshops Penn State Cooperative Extension conducted in August to help food industry people understand the irradiation process, the history, science, and technology behind it, and the nutritional aspects of irradiated foods.

Penn State speakers included Dr. Lynne Brown, Dr. Catherine Cutter, and Dr. William Henning.

Ron Eustice, executive director of the Minnesota Beef Council, and Kathleen O'Donnell of Wegmans Food Markets, Rochester, N.Y., presented an industry perspective on how consumers have reacted to purchasing irradiated foods thus far.

O'Donnell said that Wegmans Food Markets sells both irradiated and non-irradiated ground beef. When food is irradiated, the packages are clearly identified with a symbol and the words "Treated with Radiation" as required by regulations. The cost of irradiated beef is 10-30 cents a pound higher than non-irradiated ground beef. O'Donnell said sales have been aggressive and exceeded their goals, because many customers are willing to pay the price differential to ensure safe food.

O'Donnell said, "Our biggest selling point is allowing customers to taste the products. We have had no customer complaints about odor, color, and taste."

Another advantage of irradiated foods is that shelf life is extended. For example irradiated ground beef has a shelf life of 20 days.

"Companies are pumping money into research and development of irradiation to ensure safe products and receptive consumers," said Dr. Cutter.

Irradiation facilities are in several states such as New Jersey, New York, and Florida, but not in Pennsylvania. Typically companies send prepackaged food to the facilities. The prepackaged foods move on a conveyor into a thick-walled room where it is exposed to a radiation source. Depending upon the nature of the food, it will be exposed to gamma rays for 15-45 minutes, or to an electron beam for several seconds up to several minutes.

Either the food or the source of irradiation can be moved and rotated during exposure to ensure that the radiation evenly penetrates the food.

When people hear about the process, they are often wary. Some fear the process makes the food radioactive, but researches say the process does not leave any residues. The irradiation by electrons and X-rays uses ordinary electricity. No radioactive material is involved in electron beam or X-ray.

Proponents of irradiation compared it to the pasteurization process. Critics made the same derogatory comments about milk pasteurization 80 years ago.

The test is in the tasting and pricing according to Jane Landis, left, who said that as a consumer she would not want to pay more for irradiated food. She believes non-irradiated food has better flavor. Marcia Weber, York County Extension, gives "thumbs up" approval to the taste of a burger that has been irradiated.

Kathleen O'Donnell, corporate food safety specialist for Wegmans Food Markets, tells how irradiated beef was introduced to customers and their responses.

Ron Eustice, executive director of Minnesota Beef Council, enthusiastically promotes irradiation as the means to provide safe food, and believes that scientific facts will outweigh myths proported by opponents to the process.

One of the factors researchers are perfecting is trying to eliminate any color and taste changes, which is more prevalent when higher doses are used. But if doses are too low, microorganisms may survive the irradiation process, repair themselves, and become more resistant.

Irradiation is not the only method that researchers are looking at to reduce risks of foodbourne illnesses. Even with irradiation, food safety recommends that beef be cooked until it reaches an internal temperature of 160 degrees and is no longer pink.

Some critics ask, "Why bother with irradiation if we can't eat a rare steak anyway?"

Henning said, "We want to be on the safe side."

He explained that irradiation is done at the last point of contact before the product is sold to consumers, but it could become contaminated by the consumer later on if food safety guidelines are not followed.

For more information about irradiation, contact your county extension office.

"Give consumers a choice, but educate them so they can make the appropriate choice," said Dr. William Henning, Penn State meat scientist.

Dr. Catherine Cutter, food safety extension specialist, explains the science and technology of irradiation.

ANSWER — Richard Laughman, Chambersburg, requested information on Welsumers, a chicken breed, and where a breeder can be found. Thanks to Eric Gingerich, Oxford, who sent the following information: This Dutch breed, called the Welsumer in its native land, takes its name from the small village of Welsum in the Netherlands. Developed just after the turn of the 20th century, it was first shown in 1921. The breed's main characteristic is the large dark brown egg, described in an article in "Fancy Fowl" as a "rich deep flower-pot red brown, almost glowing...." The dark eggs are also found in the Dutch Barnevelders and the French Marans. Although considered a light, soft feathered, nonsitting breed, the hens frequently do go broody. Welsummers are good foragers on free range. The following farm has Welsumer chickens available on a limited basis: T&M Poultry Farm, Todd Humphries, 5324 Chesnee Hwy., Chesnee, SC 29323. Another breeder, Laurie Adams (Mother Mastiff) gave only her e-mail address as mastiffs@mindspring.com. Stromberg's Hatchery also sell the breed. Write to them at Stromberg's Chicks, P.O. Box 400, Pine River, MN 56474 or phone orders to 1-800-720-1134. For information, call (218) 587-2222.

ANSWER — Ben Stoltzfus wanted the words to the following poem. Thanks to J. Gehman, Newburg, and an unidentified reader for going to the trouble of sending the words.

Children Talk To Angels

I saw two little children
As they wandered off one day
Decided I would follow them
And watch them in their play.
They crossed a rotten boardwalk
By a raging waterfall,
And there I saw an angel
She was standing straight and tall.
Chorus: Children talk to angels
At lest that's what they say
Children talk to angels
Almost every day,
Be careful when you scold them
For things they'll likely do,
'Cause children talk to angels
Like they talk to me and you.
So listen all ye grownups
Who think you're big and strong
You must become as a little child
In heaven to belong,
So if you'll pray to Jesus
Like the little children do,
Then you will understand them
And you'll talk to angels too.

4-H HAPPENINGS

4-H Seeing Eye Puppy Club

The 4-H Seeing Eye Puppy Club met Wednesday, Sept. 18 at the Claremont Nursing Home.

There were eight dogs in attendance including Sherri, who was back visiting with her original caretakers because of a health problem. The program let her come back to stay with them for a few months until she outgrows her health problem.

The treasurer's report was given and Best Friend Award nominations were voted on. The two nominees are Elizabeth Pepperman and Kim Walden.

Pet Walk 2002 is scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 19, at City Island. The walk will begin at noon. A visit to Harrisburg (the capitol) also was planned for Oct. 19. This visit will be an excellent way for the dogs to be exposed to different settings.

The next meeting of the Seeing Eye Puppy Club will be the fourth Wednesday in October, the 23rd, instead of the third Wednesday.

Located in Juniata County along Route 333 at Port Royal, PA, midway between Harrisburg and State College, 3 mi off the Route 322 Port Royal (Route 75) exit. Follow Route 75 south to Route 333 west, turn left at Lehman's Covered Bridge (Watch for signs)

History of the Mayer Homestead

As told to Bryan D. Imes by Elkanah (Ken) Lehman

In the early 1700's, Thomas Wilson came from Ireland to Philadelphia and established himself as a successful Philadelphia merchant Being a good friend of the William Penn family, he was commissioned to chase squatters from 'Penn's Land' in this part of the Juniata Valley. In exchange, Thomas was given 1000 acres of land, owning the entirety of what we now know as Port Royal borough and vicinity When he died in the late 1700's, Wilson left everything to his son, George, who built the covered bridge in 1851. When George died, he left everything to his son, William, who passed away in 1881. William's daughter, Lucie Jane Wilson, who had married Charles W Mayer in 1878 inherited 350 acres of the original grant and when Charles died in 1932 and Lucie in 1934, the property was left to their 8 children In 1939, seven of the children turned the homestead over to their brother, George L Mayer. George retired from the Pennsylvania Railroad in 1949, moved to this farm, lived here 3 years and died in 1952. The farm was left to his sister, Rhoda Unger Mayer, who was never married Rhoda resided in the homestead after retiring from a 40-year teaching career, passed away in 1967 and left the homestead to Lucy Wilson Buck, a niece, and her husband, Elkanah (Ken) Lehman. Lucy and Ken had married in 1948 and lived here for 54 years before Lucy passed away in February 2002, a retired teacher Lucy taught English, French, & Spanish in the Juniata County School District and especially enjoyed directing plays and musicals. Ken is a retired farmer (15 years) and a retired representative for Clay Starline Agricultural Equipment, as well as having retired from an 18-year pool business, which was sold to a local man, Mark Book. Part of the original farm is now known as The Port Royal Lion's Club Park. Ken has now sold the farm to James and Susan Sheaffer of Port Royal and has ordered the sale of the items from his wife's old family homestead at public auction. Do not miss this six-generation auction

Eclectic Collection Evokes Grimm Family Stories

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

NEW PROVIDENCE (Lancaster Co.) — Few people have the stories to tell and the extraordinary collections that Steuart and Doris Grimm possess.

Their unique stories begin when Grimm was a child growing up on the family hog farm. His family had a contract with Lancaster and several other cities, which spread collected garbage on the fields for the hogs to eat.

As a child, Grimm scoured the fields for scraps of silver, zinc, and other valuables. He sold the silver scraps for 25 cents a pound. When he was 10 years old, Grimm remembers picking up $400 worth of silver in one day. By the time he was 12 years old, Grimm purchased two city houses from the scrap profits, and while in high school, a 1939 Plymouth convertible and a 1929 Ford roadster. By the time he was 18 years old, Grimm owned his own trucking business.

"I also got all the marbles any kid in Lancaster County lost," Grimm said. He explained that as a kid he picked up stray marbles wherever he saw them. He often accompanied the garbage trucks on their city rounds.

While removing garbage can lids, he consistently spied marbles in sidewalk cracks and gutters and scooped them up. What he didn't find there, he'd spot in the fields where the garbage was dumped. Grimm estimates he has 100,000 marbles, including sulfide, swirl, agates, oxbloods, handmade cat's eye, and other assorted marbles. He points with pride to his favorite shooters that helped him win many marble competitions in the West Lampeter School District.

Grimm said, "Just like Robin Williams in Peter Pan, I finally found all my marbles and they are in one location."

Grimm's mother Nora Grimm loved collecting antiques. But her husband did not share her passion for collection. So Grimm's mother was delighted when her son married Doris and had an excuse to purchase antiques to lavish on the newly-married couple.

Doris said that her mother-in-law often purchased painted and

At right, Steuart Grimm takes a few moments to relax on his parlor chair, part of a three-piece set he purchased in 1958 from an elderly 90-year-old Italian woman in Reedsville. Doris said the three-piece set is one of the hardest things to part with as it endured through raising seven children. The family has researched extensively to pinpoint the year and country where the set was manufactured. When daughter Deb was traveling throughout Europe, she saw similar carved heads on church pews in Italy. Grimm is holding a jar of marbles from his collection of an estimated 100,000. Shown also are one of their Gone With the Wind lamps, a blue with opalescent overlay water pitcher, and a three-tier brass and marble plant stand.

Sale for Steuart & Doris Grimm

plain "Moon and Star" glassware and Doris grew to value the pieces and began her own collection, which has lasted 50 years.

When the elder Mrs. Grimm passed away, boxes of her collection sat unopened for 25 years until her husband's death. It took two days to sell her collection and the Grimms said that the sale changed their lives and the way the things they collected.

"Our kids enjoyed watching us collect things. They all enjoy antiques, but three of them got bit by the (antique) bug bad," Doris said.

Daughter Deb Bomberger is one of those who shares her parents' passion. She is adamant in trying to date and identify many of her parents' antiques. Of special interest is a three-piece rosewood settee set, which they believe is from the 1700s. The deeply-carved wooden arms show a woman. The settee has parlor chairs. The one for the ladies has no arms to allow for the hoop skirts popular with women during the era it was made. The gentleman's chair has wooden arms that wrap around it.

Grimm said he purchased the set in 1958 from an elderly Italian lady.

"I searched all over Europe trying to find some history on the set," Deb said. "All I ever found were similar carvings on church pews in Italy, but I don't know if it that is a connection or not."

Grimm said that he hauled everything in his truck hauling business, which took him to every state in the U.S. He and his wife often traveled together and made sure they purchased antiques from every state. The estimate that they sold only five pieces that they have collected in more than 50 years.

Some of these antiques include a millers' desk made from chestnut wood and raised panel doors and a secret hiding place, a pie safe made with 1½-inch walnut wood with original punched-tin doors and inlaid keyholes, 18

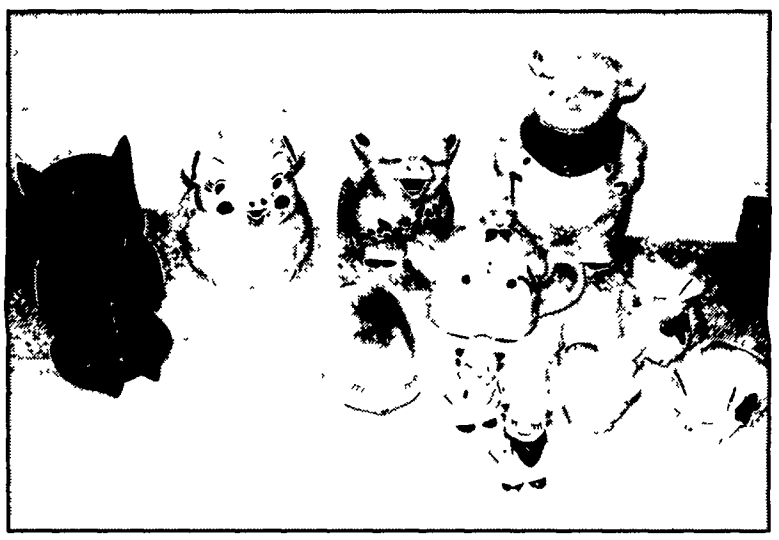
Doris was only 18 years old when her husband surprised her by giving her this bow-front china cupboard with ball and talon feet and carved lion's head for her birthday. The cupboard was filled with an extensive collection of goblets in several styles and colors.



The Grimm family had a 30,000-pig farm in the 1920s. When the farm was sold, Doris began collecting "oinkers" made of paper maiche, wood, china, ceramic, cast iron, copper, and other materials. Shown are items from her 500-600 piece collection that will be sold.

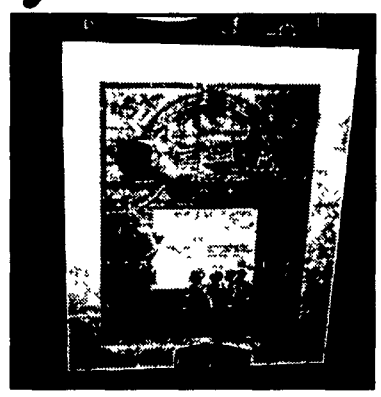
brass buckets, old family Bibles that date back to 1755, and 500 pieces of early pattern glass.

"Doris has the most extensive patterned glass collection that I've ever seen," said John Hess, auctioneer.

Doris said, "It's all early stuff. We have things from three to four generations in our family, but it's time to let go. Like they say, 'you can't take it with you,' and with my husband's health, we need to downsize."

Except for a few favorites that the Grimms will take to their newly-acquired apartment, all the pieces the Grimms have collected will be auctioned on Saturday Oct. 12, at 2441 Beaver Valley Pike (Rt. 222), New Providence.

For more information about the Grimm collection, call John Hess Auction Services Inc., (717) 733-8192.



A local resident gave the Grimms this medallion and framed sign from the 1893 Agriculture Fair conducted in Chicago. The certificate was "for very pretty samples of white oats especially as to color. Yield 25 bushels per acre. Weight 39 pounds per bushel."

Some Furniture Designed To Go To War

If you think convertible sofas and other folding furniture are a new idea, you couldn't be more wrong. Known as campaign furniture, specially designed convertible beds, chests, and other pieces offered comfort and practicality to officers on the battlefield. These days it is appreciated as the answer to small room condos as well as being conversation pieces.

Surprisingly much of it was quite elegant as surviving examples from the 18th century show. Chippendale, Hepplewhite, and Sheraton all designed beds for the battlefield. While much was either destroyed on the spot under rugged battlefield conditions, many pieces come to shops and auctions. History and the ingenuity of construction add to the appeal.

It can usually be taken apart and was made to be carried.

By the early 19th century it was considered fashionable for home decor, especially those pieces decorated with gilded carvings of trophies of war, coronets and other motifs.

Because it was so functional it became popular with travelers on sea voyages at that time.

Basically it was a spin-off of the multi-purpose, patent furniture then in vogue.

It is recorded that near the end of the 19th century field commanders would take entire, upholstored drawing room suites that could be reassembled and taken apart, on campaigns. One example was designed in 1881, in typical Victorian style with rococo, carved wood frames, and velvet upholstery.

Most familiar these days is the brass-bound, mahogany military chest that was first made for officers during the Napoleonic Wars. Some also opened to perform as a wash stand complete with a basin. Pieces were made with the consumer in mind as well as the military. A prized example is the caned, chair-bed that could be used as an arm chair and quickly transformed into a tent bed. Such a piece was designed by Thomas Butler, c.1810.

It was made for English campaigns in the East and West Indies. They were made without nuts, screws or bolts for easy conversion. Elegant and colorful canopies matched the mattress.

CLUES: Campaign furniture is a good example of things not what they seem to be at first glance. So, the next time you see something that looks merely like a flat box with brass corners, check to see if it turns into a table when you open it.

Some of the most durable are the early 19th century pieces made by the French. They began using combinations of metals that included steel and gilt bronze.

Small, stylish, round metal tables were on tripod legs. Gilt-bronze rings separated the detachable steel parts.

English campaign furniture was usually of bamboowood, walnut or mahogany with brass trim and hardware. Burl veneers were also used. Sometimes, a writing table, when closed looked like a simple box. Presto! Open, it stands on four legs.

By the mid-19th century several woods were combined that included satinwood, mahogany and rosewood.

At the time the chest with desk was introduced. Mounted on detachable ball feet, it could easily be unhinged and moved from place to place in canvas bags. The drawer pulls on chests were always rectangular and inset. Sometimes there were handles on the sides.

The growing popularity of wicker furniture in the late 19th century resulted in a wicker cabin trunk that could turn into a deck chair for shipboard military personality.

Back in the 1950s chests of drawers in the style of English military campaign chests were mass produced by several American furniture manufacturers When the antique versions come to shops or auctions, the pieces can be priced into the thousands of dollars. Since not many people recognize it, you may discover campaign furniture anywhere. It is just as practical today.

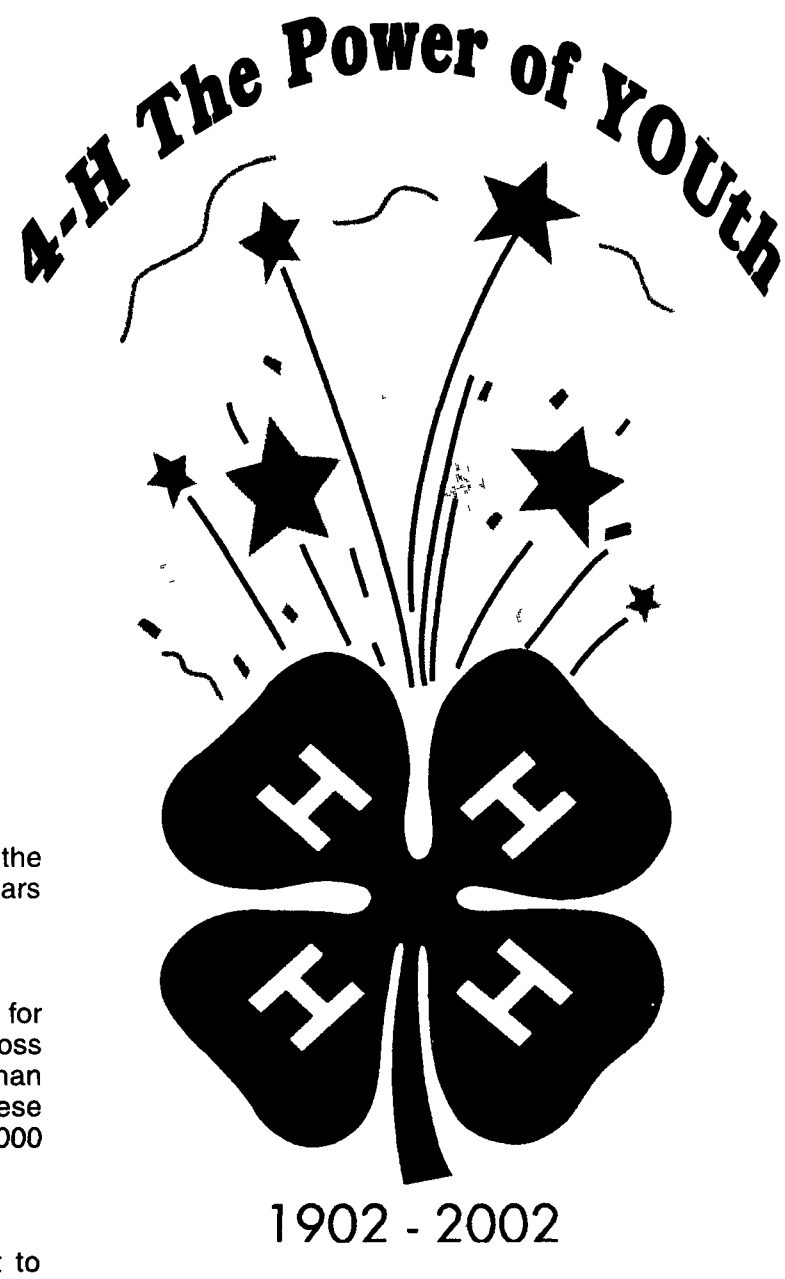
National 4-H Week

October 6-12, 2002



4-H Power of YOUth Pledge

When celebrating an anniversary, most people spend money, right? Not the 4-H youth development movement. Instead they are donating millions of dollars to their communities, country, and world through hard work and service.

The Power of YOUth Pledge, a program launched last year in preparation for the 2000 Centennial celebration, enourages each of the 3,067 counties across the nation to pledge their hands to service. As of October 1, 2002, more than 3.9 million hours of service had been performed or committed. Multiply these numbers by the federal minimum wage of $5.15 per hour and that's $20,085,000 donated to America's communities from 4-H'ers.

"Rather than erect a monument to ourselves, we decided to make a gift to America by identifying the needs of our communities nationwide and to develop a youth-led action plan that addresses these needs," said Donald T. Floyd, Jr. National 4-H Council President and CEO. "The Power of Youth Pledge Campaign will provide some of the resources to get the job done.

For more information or to pledge your time to your community. Contact your local extension office.

ASA Lauds Approval Of Soy Products By USAID

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The American Soybean Association (ASA) is pleased that the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) has approved five value-added soy protein products for use in Food for Peace programs. The decision is based on extensive nutritional information provided by the World Initiative for Soy in Human Health (WISHH) program, which is supported by ASA, the United Soybean Board and state soybean organizations. USAID's approval will allow food assistance groups, such as Africare and the World Food Programme, to request defatted soy flour, textured soy protein, soy protein concentrates, isolated soy protein and soy milk replacer through the $1 billion Food for Peace Program administered by USAID.

Lauren Landis, director of the USAID Office of Food for Peace, notified ASA of the decision and specifically cited defatted soy flour for being economical and practical for use in USAID's work in developing countries throughout the world.

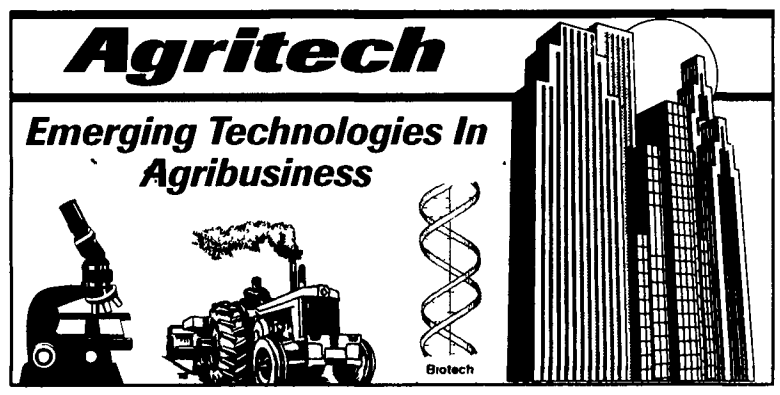
"USAID's decision creates new opportunities for U.S. soy to help fight the global battle against hunger," said ASA First Vice President Dwain Ford, an Illinois soybean farmer. "Furthermore, the Food for Peace program can help foster long-term commercial customers for U.S. soy. Some of our leading export markets, like the Philippines and South Korea, are proof that U.S. food assistance can also build trade relationships."

"Groups that deliver food aid applaud this decision since it offers them new tools to combat global malnutrition that affects more than 800 million people, including 200 million children under age five," said Ellen Levinson, of Cadwalader, Wickersham and Taft, who serves as executive director of the Coalition for Food Aid. "Soy protein is a valuable resource for non-profit voluntary organizations and cooperatives in their efforts to improve the quality of the food supply in developing countries."

Last year, the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) made a similar approval of these soy products for use in its food assistance programs based on information from the soybean checkoff-funded WISHH and the National Soybean Research Laboratory (NSRL) in Illinois.

WISHH will continue its work to assist Private Voluntary Organizations (PVOs) and other food assistance groups in developing proposals that they can submit to USAID and USDA. Many organizations are already familiar with the products because of WISHH providing technical information and the help of consultants to develop pilot projects. WISHH, NSRL and soy processors have also cooperated to introduce products and have hosted PVOs at two workshops to demonstrate the value and uses of soy.

Smart Weed Whacker Takes Guesswork Out Of Spraying



MANHATTAN, Kan. — In the not-too-distant future, tractors already decked out with air conditioning units, CD players and global positioning systems may be equipped with another handy gadget, according to Agricultural Research Service scientists and university cooperators.

The gadget in question? An optical sensor that detects weeds and prompts a herbicide sprayer to target them as the tractor drives up and down crop rows. The technology means less herbicide in the environment and lower costs for farmers.

Most farmers now apply herbicides uniformly over a field, but weed distribution is often patchy-particularly grass weeds in cereal crops. Kansas State University graduate student Ning Wang and KSU professor Naiqian Zhang, in collaboration with agricultural engineer Floyd Dowell of ARS' Grain Marketing and Production Research Center in Manhattan, Kan., and others have developed an optical weed sensor and spray control system that takes the guesswork out of herbicide application.

Using a near infrared spectrometer, the researchers studied the light absorption characteristics of weed stems and leaves. They identified five wavelengths that can be used to discriminate weeds from crops and soil and, with them, developed the optical sensor.

The current model requires the tractor operator to spend about 5 to 10 minutes "training" the sensor to spot different weeds. The operator does this by placing the sensor above a weed and typing in a "weed code" on a simple keypad. Once the weed sensor has enough statistical data, it prompts the operator to begin driving up and down the rows. If the sensor detects weeds, the herbicide applicator will spray them.

During laboratory tests, the sensor identified wheat, bare soil, and weeds with accuracies approaching 100 percent. Although these results are promising, the researchers believe it will be several more years before the system is ready to be commercialized.

ARS, the U.S. Department of Agriculture's chief scientific research agency, provided funding for this research, as did KSU, the National Science Foundation and the Advanced Manufacturing Institute.

Agway Reaches Agreement To Sell Agronomy Businesses To Growmark

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Agway Inc. announced this week it has reached agreement to sell its Agronomy and Seedway businesses as well as Agway's stock interest in both fertilizer manufacturer CF Industries and Allied Seed LLC to Growmark, Inc., a Bloomington, Ill.-based agricultural cooperative. Terms of the agreement were not released. The transaction is expected to close before the end of the year.

Agway announced in its intent to sell certain businesses, including its agronomy and seed interests. As part of the acquisition, Growmark would assume ownership of all currently operating retail fertilizer facilities, wholesale fertilizer terminals and seed plants. These facilities are predominantly located in Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio.

"This transaction would help Agway address the complex financial issues that our cooperative faces," said Agway CEO Don Cardarelli. "We are very pleased that this transaction would allow Agway Agronomy and Seedway to become part of the Growmark system."

Growmark, Inc., is a federated regional cooperative that currently provides agriculture-related products and services to local cooperative members across the Midwest and Ontario, Canada.

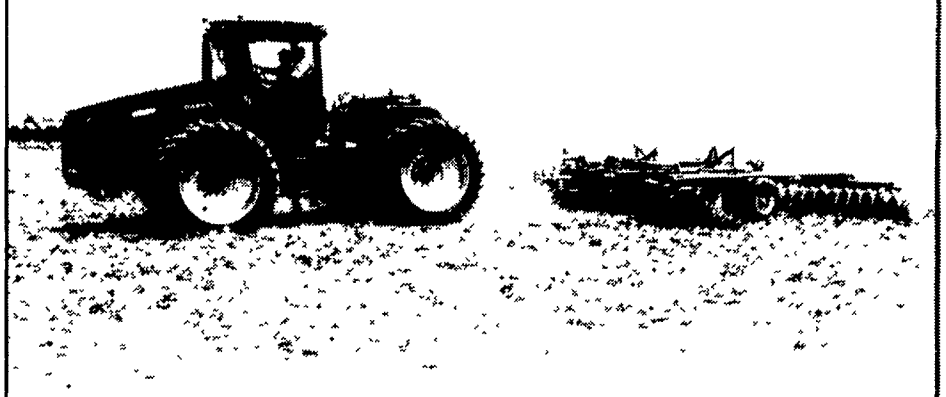
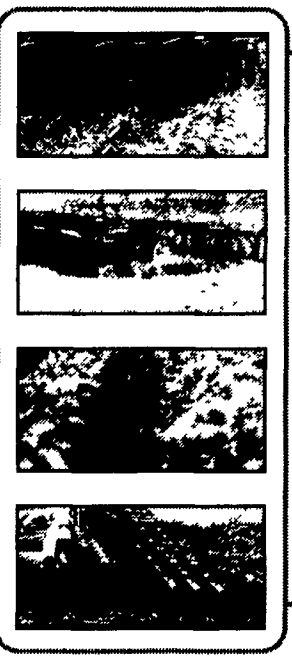
Put Profits Back into Tillage Management With Krause's Profit-Till System

In 1983 Krause introduced the Profit Till System - based on the principles of soil tilth, crop residue management, plant food availability, and moisture management through proper and efficient tillage practices. 20 years later the Profit Till System still focuses on increased yields, reduced production costs and enhanced profit potential.





The Four Key Elements of Profit Till

CROP RESIDUE MANAGEMENT – Residue management protects soil from erosion by minimizing runoff. Compaction is also reduced by the protection provided by surface residue in heavy rainfall conditions.

SOIL TILTH – Good soil tilth is a determining factor of a plant's potential for root development and accordingly yield potential.

PLANT FOOD AVAILABILITY – A healthy, non-compacted soil environment promotes the growth of a well-developed root system, allowing more contact area with the soil and increased nutrient uptake.

SEED BED CONDITIONS – Plants that get off to a quick and healthy start have the best chance of reaching maximum yield potential

Dairyland Seed Releases New Soybean Varieties

WEST BEND, Wis. — Dairyland Seed recently announced the release of 12 new soybean varieties for the 2003 planting season. Each of these varieties can be seen at research tours and field days through the Midwest this fall. The descriptions of the new products for this area include:

DSR-007/RR Maturity 007: A terrific package of high yield and excellent iron chlorosis tolerance for our Northern-most areas of the Red River Valley.

DSR-009/RR Maturity 009: An attractive bean that likes narrow rows. Features moderate resistance to brown stem rot and very good iron chlorosis tolerance.

DSR-040/RR Maturity 0.4: This bean combines very good iron chlorosis scores and moderate resistance to brown stem rot with very good phytophthora tolerance.

DSR-155/RR Maturity 1.5: Very high yielding bean with good iron chlorosis tolerance and the Rps1k gene for PRR resistance.

DSR-184/RR Maturity 1.7: An extremely high yielding, widely adaptable variety showing outstanding performance from east to west. Features the Rps 1k gene for phytophthora resistance as well as tolerance to white mold, brown stem rot and iron chlorosis.

DSR-191/RR Maturity 1.9: A superior yielding soybean with cyst nematode resistance. Also shows resistance to brown stem rot and features tolerance to iron chlorosis.

DSR-199/RR Maturity 1.9: Our research results indicate this is the highest yielding late Group I soybean in the industry. Entered in state trials as DST-2129RR, it features excellent iron chlorosis and white mold tolerance. It also features resistance to brown stem rot. Due to its combination of high yield potential and excellent defensive traits, we are bringing this soybean on to replace DSR-197RR.

DSR-251/RR Maturity 2.5: Entered as DST-2224/RR in state trials, it was first in the Southern UW trials with 66 bushels per acre — six bushels above the three-location average. It carries brown stem rot resistance and iron chlorosis tolerance. It has consistent high yields and is widely adapted.

DSR-255/RR SCN Maturity 2.7: This product shows very strong cyst resistance in our trials. It should be used primarily where cyst pressure is high. In those situations, it will provide very good yield results when other varieties would fail.

DSR-274/RR SCN Maturity 2.7: An extremely high yielding soybean cyst nematode resistant variety. It features excellent tolerance to phytophthora root rot, white mold and iron chlorosis.

DSR-297/RR Maturity 2.9: An excellent yielding variety that also carries the Rps1k gene for phytophthora resistance. The phytophthora resistance gene makes this an excellent choice for the heavy soils found in many Indiana and Ohio fields.

DSR-320/RR Maturity 3.2: Entered in state trials as DST-3146, it features excellent yields along with the Rps1k gene for phytophthora root rot resistance. It also shows excellent field tolerance to phytophthora and very good tolerance to brown stem rot. Very strong performance in Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio research trials. Due to its medium plant height, we recommend planting at higher populations to maximize yields.

DSR-340/RR SCN Maturity 3.3: In addition to strong yields, this variety features very strong soybean cyst nematode resistance.

Pennsylvania Rural Electric Association Serves 600,000 Residents

The Pennsylvania Rural Electric Association (PREA), based in Harrisburg, Pa., is the service organization for the non-profit consumer-owned rural electric cooperatives in Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Currently, the 13 co-ops in Pennsylvania and one in New Jersey provide electric service to more than 600,000 rural residents, businesses and industries. Pennsylvania's co-ops own and maintain about 12.5 percent of the electric distribution lines in the state, covering nearly one-third of the Commonwealth's land area in 41 counties. These lines represent one of the largest non-governmental investments in rural infrastructure in the state and are an essential component of business and industry.

PREA's 14-member board of directors — one director elected from each of its member cooperatives — conducts the association's business to best serve the consumer-members of the co-ops.

PREA works jointly with the Allegheny Electric Cooperative Inc., a generation and transmission cooperative that provides wholesale power to the 14 co-ops.

HISTORY

As late as the 1930s, only six out of every 100 rural Pennsylvanians knew the miracle of electric light bulb in their homes. The reason — establishing power companies in Pennsylvania and New Jersey had decided that running electric lines into rural areas would not make them a profit.

As a rule, power companies charged farmers $2,000 to $3,000 per mile to build lines to their homes and then charged electric rates higher than those in the cities. Since the average gross income of a farm family of the period was just $1,800 per year, most couldn't afford electric service.

In many areas, power was not available at any cost. For a time it seemed profit needs — greed — of stockholder-controlled private power companies would condemn most of Pennsylvania's and New Jersey's rural population to live forever with kerosene lamps and hand pumps.

But rural leader and a handful of politicians were not ready to accept the status quo. They began working to demonstrate that electric power could be provided to rural areas at a reasonable cost and began developing a business structure to make that delivery possible.

In 1931, New York Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt established the Power of Authority of the State of New York (PASNY) to develop water power on the St. Lawrence River. PASNY produced the first study on the actual costs of electric distribution and helped demonstrate the practicality of providing electricity to rural areas.

In 1935, armed with studies showing both the economic feasibility and the benefits of providing electricity to rural areas, then-President Roosevelt signed an executive order forming the Rural Electrification Administration (REA).

The REA program was initially intended as an inducement to the private power companies to begin serving rural areas. But even with the incentives provided by two percent REA loans, the private power suppliers showed little interest in building the necessary lines. By the end of 1935, it was clear that the private power companies weren't serious about acting on the government's offer to electrify the countryside. Most of the loan applications and inquires REA received came from farm co-ops. REA now realized that farmers and their rural neighbors were willing to take electrification into their own hands on a cooperative basis.

Farmers had long experience with cooperatives. In fact, the co-op was the business structural rural people adopted when confronted with a task too large for any family to handle itself.

It was natural then that rural leaders chose to form another kind of co-op to provide themselves and their neighbors with electricity. Since extending central station electric service required very specialized engineering skills, many in Congress were convinced rural electrification would never be accomplished without REA receiving regular appropriations and full status. So in 1936, one year and 20 days after REA had been created, Congress passed legislation making REA a permanent government agency. In 1939, REA became part of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

On October 20, 1994, a sweeping reorganization of the Ag Department took place. As a result, after 59 years of existence, REA was officially disbanded. Most REA functions were transferred to a new Rural Utilities Service (RUS).

But the mission of rural electrification continues. Today, about 1,000 electric cooperatives across the United States provide power to more than 25 million consumer-members. Each co-op is a locally owned, taxpaying business incorporated under the laws of its individual state.

Rural electric cooperatives have been delivering low-cost electric service to Pennsylvania and New Jersey rural residents since 1936, when the Steamburg Electric Cooperative Association (later consolidated into Northwestern Rural Electric Cooperative) was established in Erie and Crawford counties.

The 14 rural electric cooperatives that today comprise PREA were organized between 1936 and 1941. By the time the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941, all of them had gone through the pangs of becoming organized, of getting their first loans, of making arrangements for power supply at least on a short-term basis and had begun construction of lines to reach their unserved neighbors.

With the outbreak of WWII, the co-ops realized they need a statewide organization to speak for them as one voice on legislation issues. The co-ops created PREA in February 1942.

PA farmers have great hay crops with South Dakota alfalfa seed. Painterland Farms, Westfield, PA, John Painter said "The Trask's seed grew extremely well. We recommend it to anyone. It is real leafy and yielded as well as any of the high priced name brand seeds. It cost 40% as much. We planted 294 acres. We intend to plant more this spring. It was exceptionally winter hardy and resisted frost damage. We are very pleased.

Join the numerous farmers in the PA/NY area harvesting superb alfalfa from South Dakota seed

Announcing:

Crude Soy Oil Now Available

With the addition of our new soybean processing facility, we now offer soybean oil as an animal nutrition product. Processing the soybeans ourselves allows us to utilize locally grown soybeans and support our local agricultural community!

Crude Soybean Oil

A product of Keystone's expelling process, this oil can be used in a wide variety of on farm applications. Crude soy oil is a natural alternative to animal fats and provides needed energy in various rations.

Uses of Crude Soy Oil Include:

- Use as a high energy feed ingredient in swine and poultry diets.
- Especially useful in sow lactation diets, pig starter and grow/finish diets.
- Used as an added energy source in broiler, turkey and layer feeds.
- Can be used for dust control purposes.
- Can be used as a lubricant for feeding systems.

Advantages of Crude Soy Oil:

- Use as a direct replacement for animal fat.
- Vegetable based product.
- Holding tank does not need to be heated if temperature is above 30 degrees, which reduces storage and handling costs compared to animal fat.
- Bulk delivery, partial loads available direct to farm by Keystone Mills.
- Customer may pick up to save delivery costs.

Other Soy Products Available:

- Keystone offers Golden Pro 46 XP which is 46% protein - 6-7% oil, Golden Meal 40 which is 40% crude protein with 18% oil.

Keystone Mills Soybean Exchange Program

- We will take your soybeans in trade for Golden ProXP 46, Golden Meal 40
- Contact Keystone Mills for details on our soybean exchange program featuring these quality nutritional products.
